adults develop cardiovascular disease

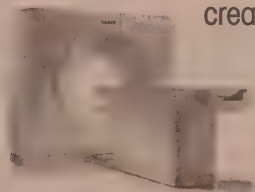

Evaluate your risk at East End Cardiology.

East End Cardiology (EEC) is a local group of board-certified cardiologists who specialize in the diagnosis and treatment of cardiovascular disease.

You can help protect yourself through early detection and treatment. Now there's a way to look into your heart. Literally. It's called the EEC Scan64SM.

The EEC Scan64SM is a brand-new, non-invasive, diagnostic tool that uses a 64-slice CT system to create a three-dimensional image of your heart. And East End Cardiology is proud to be the first in Suffolk County to offer this new technology.

The EEC Scan64SM

- Is quick, painless, and non-invasive
- Is performed in an open scan environment
- Delivers a level of detail not previously possible without using a more invasive procedure, such as cardiac catheterization.
- Detects heart disease before symptoms occur.

The EEC Scan64SM will evaluate your risk of cardiovascular disease. For more information or to make an appointment, call us today at 866-4SCAN64 (866-472-2664).

Grumman F-14 Fighter, Built in Riverhead, Is Decommissioned

*By Dan Rattiner
and Gene Tyler Sendlewski*

The eastern end of Long Island is known today as a playground for the rich and famous, and the landscape is sprinkled with golf courses, polo fields, beach clubs and big vacation mansions. If you were to ask someone what the dominant economic force is today on the East End, you would surely learn that it is the service industry serving this playground. We are a sweet, sweet part of America.

A generation ago, however, the economy of the eastern end of Long Island was dominated by a much more dramatic and dangerous kind of activity. Amidst the farms and fishing boats that have always dotted the landscape, there was, tucked away, a huge government-driven industry of military muscle and hardware. The United States was caught in a cold war with the Soviets. There were Nike guided missiles in a woods in Wading River. There were big guns pointing out to sea at Montauk. And there were Air Force fighter jets at the Westhampton Air Base.

By far the biggest economic enterprise on eastern Long Island at that time, in fact the biggest enterprise on all of Long Island, was the design and building of fighter aircraft. In fact, the single largest builder of these aircraft

— although not the only builder of these aircraft — was Grumman. For more than half a century, from 1940 to 1990, Grumman was, every year, the single largest employer on all of Long Island. Its administration and research facilities were located in Nassau County, at Bethpage, but its manufacturing and testing arm was located in a heavily guarded, 2,900 acre woods in Calverton, just to the west of Riverhead. At its peak, more than 30,000 peoenemy, and protect our shores from the air attack of almost any intruder.

Without a doubt, however, the single most memorable aircraft produced almost entirely on Long Island was the Grumman F-14 Tomcat fighter plane. The contract to produce this aircraft was let by the Navy in 1971. And from that year until 1997, the skies over eastern Long Island were the very visual test track for almost one thousand spanking new Tomcat aircraft. There are many people alive today — mostly men — who remember the great thrill they felt as the earth shook and a thunderous sound swept through as a bright, shiny new F-14 Tomcat, armed with bombs and missiles affixed under its swept-back wings, got pulled through spins, loops and twists and then simply streaked off at a thousand miles an hour toward the Atlantic Ocean. The F-14 was the most formidable fighter-bomber of its generation. And amidst the peacefulness of the East End, there were those who thought it a privilege to be among them. Certainly there were those who brought their bread to the table because of them.

Recently, I was contacted by a man named Gene Tyler Sendlewski, who lives in Calverton. He grew up there, just a few miles

The only F-14s that ever got handed over to a foreign government very shortly fell into unfriendly hands.

ple worked for Grumman, whose major contracts were largely for the Navy. And together with some other manufacturers, such as Republic Aviation, which built jets for the Air Force further to the west, about one person in ten on Long Island was employed, directly or indirectly, by the military manufacturing business. From Long Island, this country could rain death from the skies down upon any Billy Joel, of East Hampton, got a standing ovation from nearly 5,000 Syracuse University graduates last Sunday after he serenaded them and urged them to do what they love in life. "Don't do it for security or status, prestige, money, or, for crying out loud, don't do it for somebody else," he said. "Do it for love. Because if you love what you do, you'll always do what you love." Joel also received a doctorate of fine arts from Syracuse at the ceremony, one of six honorary degrees the rocker has received.

Steven Spielberg, of East Hampton, was among the most generous celebrities in the world, according to a new Forbes survey. (He recently topped Forbes' list of billionaire entertainers as well.) The big-time producer wrote two checks, worth $1.5 million each, to aid in the post-Tsunami and post-Katrina recovery. Other A-listers included were Hamptonite Paul McCartney, Angelina Jolie, Oprah Winfrey, Jackie Chan, Bono (U2), Nicolas Cage, Sandra Bullock and Celine Dion.

From his show on Sirius Satellite Radio last week, Shock-jock and Hamptonite Howard Stern dismissed rumors that he wants to have his satellite radio show syndicated with FM radio. Stern is currently in the fifth month of a five-year, $500 million contract with Sirius and claims he is never going back. Also, an agreement is near to settle a lawsuit with CBS over his move to Sirius Satellite Radio, which took place 5 months ago.

from the Grumman facility and its top secret military airport. Behind the barbed wire, it was not hard to figure out, considering the planes landing and taking off, that there was an airport in there.

"When I was growing up," he wrote me in a recent e-mail, "I lived less than two miles from the Grumman gate. They would test the afterburners at night. They would also fly over the house at low altitude, and I can remember being fascinated by it. I remember one time a plane came a little too close. It was exhilarating."

Sendlewski told me that he had written a history of the F-14. And he wondered if I would like to see it for consideration in Dan's Papers. As I spent part of my youth here, and remember the F-14s overhead too, I said I would like to see it and he sent it. His article is a highly technical account spanning the period from 1970 to 1992 when the contract to produce the aircraft ran out and in 1997 when the last F-14 came down the line. And it celebrates the end of the Tomcat era. The last two operational squadrons will be phased out within 90 days.

For those interested, I am posting it this week on our website. For the general reader, I have written below a less technical version of his account. It is perhaps most remarkable that although on half a dozen occasions the F-14 has provided air cover for Navy or Army operations on the ground, dropping bombs from high altitudes — for example in Bosnia and Afghanistan, in its 34-year-run of the production of this aircraft (a remarkable run by any measure in a world of constantly improving technology) — its weapons were fired at enemy aircraft on only two occasions: over the Gulf of Sidra where they were challenged by two Libyan SU-22 Fitter aircraft. The Tomcats shot both down. And on January 4, 1989, two Libyan MIG-23s challenged two Tomcats in the Mediterranean that had taken off from the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy. The Tomcats shot down both of these MIGs, the most sophisticated built by the Soviet Union, without any losses to themselves. The MIG pilots parachuted into the sea where they were rescued.

After an estimated one hundred billion dollars in expense, there were just these two days of combat in 34 years. And no Tomcats shot down. Make of it what you will. But you cannot discount the deterrent effect of its presence. Or the huge technological advances invented and developed here on Long Island, which led to the development of countless other peaceful uses. Not the least of these was the movie Top Gun, starring Tom Cruise. Those were F-14s, the top of the line, zipping dramatically across the skies in that movie, just as they did earlier across the skies of eastern Long Island. Yup.

The F-14 had its beginnings as a result of a rubbish heap of an airplane called the F-111 built out in California. During the Vietnam War, Secretary of State Robert McNamara (who is still around today, saying we are making the same mistakes in Iraq as President Johnson made in Vietnam) pushed for and got his own mistake at that time. He had noted that the Navy, Air Force and Army were producing three entirely separate aircraft from three entirely different manufacturers. Why not build one warplane that could fulfill the missions of all three?

When the military leaders told him the missions were so different that it would be impossible, he attributed their position to the cozy relationships they had with the three suppliers. Thus he ordered the building of the F-111, the contract for which was won by General Dynamics. Several thousand of them were supposed to be produced. But when the F-111 came off the line it was overweight, slow and way over budget. Disappointed, the military shut down the production line prematurely, and went back to producing separate aircraft for the different branches. Grumman, which had produced the earlier F-9 Panther jet for the Navy, won the bid with an aircraft that was technologically way, way ahead of its time.

The designers at Grumman created an aircraft that could attack and destroy an enemy, in fact dozens of enemies, all at the same time, in different directions, and even way beyond where they could be seen by the naked eye. A pilot flew it at twice the speed of sound (it would automatically go into swing-wing mode, something that the F-111 could only do manually with the turning of a crank) and an engineer sat directly behind, operating all the computers and weapons systems. With all this sophistication, Grumman found they could achieve greater stability, particularly on land-

Mt. St. Helens Insurance

If Your Insurance is Cancelled, It Gives You Peace of Mind

By Dan Rattiner

As you may know, a total of three major insurance companies have announced they will no longer write new homeowners policies on the eastern end of Long Island. They think the East End is ripe for a huge catastrophe that could result in huge claims.

As private companies, they apparently have every right to decide where they want to write their insurance policies, and although our State Assemblyman Fred Thiele is vigorously pursuing legislation to force them to change their decision on the grounds of "geographic discrimination," it seems unlikely that will succeed.

All this has created huge anxiety. What if we have NO insurance? What are we to do?

Dan's Papers has now learned that because of the arrival of a new company, East End homeowners are now going to be able to breathe easier. The company is called Mount Saint Helens' Insurance, and it is opening a small office on the second floor above a store on Main Street in Southampton. We visited one of the principals of this company there the other day. His name is David Priggle.

"What we are doing is providing a place where people can send the money that they used to send to the insurance companies for coverage."

"So you provide coverage?"

"No. We are here just to deal with the anxiety of having no coverage. We think the big problem is this anxiety. Anxiety can cause weight loss, illness, emotional problems. Here we are, a company you can send money to. We provide peace of mind."

"So you are not an insurance company."

"Not in the traditional sense, no."

"But the name of the company is Mount St. Helens' Insurance."

"We wanted a name that would inspire confidence. If you are sending your money somewhere to be used to give you peace of mind

MONTAUK GETTING A WHAT? A TRAFFIC LIGHT?

By Dan Rattiner

A traffic light has been proposed for Montauk. A TRAFFIC LIGHT HAS BEEN PROPOSED FOR MONTAUK! The people of Montauk are beside themselves. Up until now, not having a traffic light has been a badge of honor for the very special place that this town is in the summertime. Traffic lights are for other places, places where you have a lot of people in their cars passing through to get to someplace else. Montauk is NOT a place that you pass through to get someplace else. You are already there. There is nowhere further to go. If you get to the center of town and can't figure things out you just make a right or left turn and circle around and around.

Indeed, there are probably people who have never been out of Montauk who have never even seen a traffic light. What's a traffic light? It's explained to them. A red light on top, a yellow light in the middle and a green light on the bottom, all of which are lit up in a different order than the red, yellow and green lights that face the roads that come in at ninety degrees to the one you are looking at. What the hell is that all about?

The local weekly newspaper for East Hampton, The Star, asked people in Montauk for their comments about the proposed traffic light last week. These are some of the replies they got.

"If you put up one, others will soon follow," said Bill Akin.

"They're killing this place if they put in a light," said Rav Friedel.

Montauk has a population now of 3,000 people. It's a substantial place twelve miles long and four miles wide with two downtown villages, a fishing fleet, an ocean beach, a golf course and about forty motels. In the summertime when things are especially busy, in the

about your home, you want a company with a substantial name. Actually, we had considered several different possible names. Krakatoa Insurance was one. Krakatoa was the largest volcano in the history of the world, and it entirely exploded in 1848. Nothing like it has ever happened before. But it was in Indonesia, and who knows where that is? We considered Gibraltar Insurance. But Gibraltar is taken. And we considered Grand Canyon Insurance. But we thought naming an insurance company after a great split in the ground didn't have, well, what can I say, we thought it would be better to consider something taller, more made out of granite or something. So we chose Mount St. Helens."

"That's a mountain that exploded. It's a volcano."

"Yes, and it wasn't so long ago and so most Americans remember it. It was in America."

"But you don't pay out if someone makes a claim."

"That's true. We're not set up to do that. But how is this different than with regular insurance companies? Most people have a tree fall against their house and they don't make a claim. They are afraid of claims. The insurance company makes it very clear that if you make a claim they cancel your insurance. You can't blame them for turning you away if they have to pay something out to you. Insurance money is supposed to get shoveled IN. Nothing's supposed to go out. Nobody can stay in business very long doing that. There are all these clerks and typists that have to get paid."

"People figure they will make a claim if they have a disaster."

"They figure that. But they STILL don't make claims. There's always the fear of a bigger disaster down the road. So whatever it is, a broken pipe or a tree busting a hole in the roof, they stop and think — if I make a claim here they cover it but then they cancel — so is this the 'big one'? I don't think so. So still no claim."

"So you're like every other insurance company."

"Except for this minor detail involving the claim. If one of our customers makes a claim, even though they know ahead of time we don't accept claims, we cancel the policy, just like a regular insurance company. The minor difference is we have this little computer trick where we do it retroactive to BEFORE they made the claim. As I said, we are here to provide peace of mind. And I might add our rates are low."

"How low?"

"On average, fifteen percent lower than the companies that are pulling out. You get peace of mind, and you get the pleasure of getting a bargain. What more can you ask?"

"Thank you very much."

"Please be careful you don't trip on the rug going down the stairs. There's a handrail to hold on to."

very center of town they put a traffic cop to sort things out between the tourists and surfers and cars and motorcycles. It works fine.

But upon investigation, this newspaper has learned that this proposed traffic light is not to be used in the traditional manner and it is not even proposed to be put up where a whole lot of cars go. The firehouse is down by the railroad station in an area where there is a lot of woods and pastures. A road crosses where the driveway comes out to the street. The firemen are concerned that when the siren sounds that there is a fire and the trucks are fired up and sent out down the driveway, lights flashing and clanging away like hell has frozen over, there needs to be a traffic light, just one light not three, that suddenly turns red to stop the cars, if any, that might be coming down the crossroad.

No fire, no light. Not a big deal.

I think it will be fine. Still, it's gonna take some getting used to."

MORE SOLUTIONS FOR THE SAG HARBOR LIBRARY OR THE DUMMING DOWN OF AMERICA....

10 Years

New Plans Might Finally Break Library Stalemate in Sag Harbor

By Dan Rattiner

The people making decisions in Sag Harbor about the future of the town library are having a terrible time. Beginning about ten years ago, the library building, which is directly across from the Whaling Museum, became overcrowded due to the growth taking place in the town. There were now too many people and too many books. Unfortunately, when it was built way back in the early 1900s, the architects decided it should be a perfectly round Greek temple two stories high with a dome, a long flight of steps going up to a portico with Ionic columns out front. It is indeed a wonderful building. Everything is there except perhaps for two growling concrete lions to guide your way up the steps. How the hell do you put an addition on something that is round?

During these past ten years, various committees have met to make proposals and decisions about what to do. There's a property out of town in Mashashimuet Park that the library owns. Adjacent to the current building, they have a neighbor willing to sell a property to them. However, the park is way out of town, and the neighbors next door want an arm and a leg. It goes on and on. The bound volumes containing the minutes of these committee meetings and village trustee meetings and failed bond issues and public commentary over the past ten years in and of themselves might fill the old library even without any books in it. But thank God so far nobody has asked.

In any case, now there is a new proposal to solve the problem. Or a series of new proposals. One involves building a new 11,000 square foot library at Mashashimuet Park for $5.87 million, and an 1,800 square foot addition to the old building for $3.63 million. The other proposal involves building a larger library at the park, one of 16,000 square feet, for $8.5 million. These prices have gone up substantially on a per foot basis because of the rising cost of fuel and materials in recent years.

MAYBE THE FREEDOM TOWER SHOULD BE SHORTER?

By Dan Rattiner

Last Friday evening, I saw an animated video of what the Freedom Tower will look like when it is built. The camera, aimed at the building, started out at ground level somewhere in Brooklyn, then rose up, as an airplane might, and at about 5,000 feet slowly circled Manhattan island. From every side, the Tower, rising 1776 feet to its spire, was surrounded by small skyscrapers half that size that seemed to be worshipping it. What drama. The airplane swung slowly around. The Freedom Tower practically leaped up like a stripper leaping happily up out of a birthday cake.

"That's got to be the stupidest thing I ever saw," the man perched on the stool next to me said. We were watching this, at the time, on the television set above the bar at Bobby Van's Restaurant in Bridgehampton. "Why don't they just paint a bull's eye on it?"

Somehow, his comment made me think of the cartoon in the Danish newspaper that featured Muhammad with a turban designed as a bomb on his head. The extremist Muslims hadn't liked it. They expressed themselves by burning, looting, kidnapping and killing people. More than two dozen people from Indonesia to Morocco died to make it clear that such cartoons are not welcome additions to the planet, as far as they are concerned.

Nice people, these particular Muslims. These are the people who rammed the airplanes into the World Trade Center twin towers five years ago to express their displeasure with the way we conduct our lives. The objection, I think, was with "World Trade." Had we named the twin towers Heckle and Jeckle they'd probably be still standing today with all those people still alive. But the extremist Muslims don't like western style World Trade coming into

A bond to build a new library in the park two years ago was turned down by the voters. Now they are back with this new proposal.

I wonder if they have thought of this particularly unique idea that I thought of. I am tired of writing about the Sag Harbor library.

How about just making the present library — named the John Jermain Library after the grandfather of the nice lady who put up the money for it in 1906 — just a reading room and lecture rotunda, with no books whatsoever? You could have authors giving readings, lectures about writing, lectures about history and memoir writing. The books? Forget the books. The library has many members who are residents of the town. Give ten books to each resident, tell them to take them home, and give them a little library stamp and pad with the date on it and give them a few stacks of overdue cards, the kind that go in the sleeve on the inside back cover.

The libraries at all these homes in town would be "open" from, say, noon to four. People could go to the John Jermain Library — one of its virtues is that it is just a short walk from anywhere in the center of town — use the card catalogue to find out what book they want to take out, and then go to where the particular books are kept.

I think this would be a wonderful solution for the people of Sag Harbor. It would give them the opportunity to socialize and gossip and get to know one another. The hours they were "open" could coincide with lunch or high tea if the homeowner wished to offer that service. It could be just what the town ordered.

And finally, I think it would bring to an end all the proposals and committee meetings and meetings and discussions and fistfights and letters to the editor in that town that have been going on during the past ten years. People are tired of it. There are so many more important things to deal with in that town. Whether the windmill on Long Wharf should be given a fresh coat of stain. Whether they should still be sounding a noon whistle now that all the factories have closed.

their part of the world. They have their own way of expressing that.

Recently, I've been reading commentaries about the cartoon issue. Some commentators apologized to the Muslims about the publication of the cartoons. The cartoons were in poor taste. Not even funny. We should have noticed. Very sorry you were offended. And it won't happen again.

Other commentators say it's all about freedom of the press, and if we aren't going to stand up to defend it, who is? They republish the cartoons.

And still other commentators anguish about what the proper response should be. They waffle this way and that, and say they just can't come up with any coherent thought. The problem, intellectually, is a conundrum. Something beyond their ken. What are we to do?

Well, as far as the Freedom Tower is concerned, we are rubbing their faces in it. Knock something down? We'll build it bigger, better. We just dare you to try to knock it down again. Okay?

Now then, shall I show you the wonderful view from the top? Shall you and your firm rent the three top floors? I see that is what you need. Turns out we have three floors up there still available.

We are dealing with these extremist Muslims, people who, if you sit in the row in front of them and keep your hat on, will blow your head off. God has ordered them to do it. You are a non-believer. An infidel. You deserve to have your head blown off.

Given that we live in a world, a western world, where there is respect for human life and, at least for a while, good manners towards those who keep their hats on when they might take them off, it would seem we don't see eye to eye here. The prudent thing to do would be two things. Try to avoid offending them. And then if they notice us anyway and behave atrociously, send them forcefully off to meet the 72 virgins in the sky that are waiting for them while they are still young enough to enjoy them.

But was it really necessary to let them know they can't knock down a tall building and get

Take an Illegal Thrill Ride on East Hampton Runway 4-22

By David Lion Rattiner

One would think that when you decide that you are going to run an airport you are going to be prepared to handle potholes on your runways. This doesn't seem to be the case in East Hampton, however. Runway number 4-22 is a bumpy road. Airplanes that used to take off and land on this runway (it's now been closed) sure used to get an exciting ride. There were cracks here, potholes there, and maybe a dead possum in the middle of it.

It got so bad two years ago that the FAA wrote to the town demanding that the town submit a runway repair plan to fix things up. But the town immediately responded to the FAA demand with a letter citing a resolution made in 1989. The town claimed that the resolution from 1989 said to abandon the runway. The FAA backed off.

The resolution that people are talking about is Town Board Resolution No. 145, dated January 10, 1989. However, the resolution is not cut and dried like many have said. A letter written to members of the East Hampton Town Board was sent by an organization called Save East Hampton Airport Inc. which has been able to gather the support of 1,400 taxpayers that do not want the runway closed. They say that according to Town Board Resolution No. 145, there is no indication to close the runway.

Stating in the letter, "the said resolution states that no other improvements or projects shall be undertaken without the formal amendment of the revised Airport Master Plan Updated following the preparation of a draft environmental impact statement and a public hearing on any such proposed additional improvements or projects." It also stated clearly in the letter that, "There is no reference to the closure of runway 4-22 in the ten projects and improvements contained in the adopted Master Plan."

Okay, so fine, it doesn't say to close the runway according to the resolution, but the fact of

RABBI GELFAND RESIGNS POST AT JEWISH CENTER

By Dan Rattiner

The crisis at the Jewish Center of the Hamptons resolved itself this week. Hopefully, things will now settle down and this will be the last article I will have to write about that institution for a considerable time.

The crisis pitted the Congregation of the Center against the Board of Directors. At stake was whether Rabbi David Gelfand would stay or not. His contract expires June 1, 2006 and beginning last summer, it became apparent that the Board was unhappy with him for one reason or another and unlikely to renew the contract when the term concluded. The Board confirmed that position officially in the last week of April. At that point, the Congregation, after having a judge determine that according to their contract it was the Board's right to do this, went on a campaign to strip the Board of its powers. As this crisis went on and on, taking up huge amounts of energy and time and lawsuits – it has been going on for almost a year – contributions to the Center sagged. It has been widely reported, though not confirmed, that contributions were less than half of what they had been at this time a year ago, a situation that if true could jeopardize the future of the organization.

This past week, Rabbi Gelfand himself took action by announcing his resignation. According to members of the Congregation I spoke to, he said he simply could not take all the drama and stress anymore. He had sought and been offered a position as Rabbi of Temple Israel on Manhattan's Upper East Side and he had accepted. On May 20, the Rabbi is to meet with the congregation there and if all is satisfactory, he will be officially installed as their new rabbi with a start date of July 1.

The board now has a search committee out looking for a new rabbi, who would begin on July 1 and who would be given the title of Interim Rabbi, which would give the board, the rabbi and the congregation one year to decide if this new rabbi is right for them. At that point, either the Interim Rabbi will leave and there will be another Interim Rabbi, or the new Interim Rabbi will stay and be offered a contract and become the institution's permanent rabbi.

Much bitterness remains between the Board and the Congregation at this point. For example, leaders of the Congregation are reporting the matter is that the runway is a bunch of potholes and it either needs to be fixed or closed. So why not fix it? Well, the problem here is that nobody is too sure who is going to pay for it.

There are basically two parties that are in charge of paying for these kinds of things. There is the town and the FAA. So who will pick up the tab? But even the FAA agrees that the runway is not safe and should not be used. Officials examined the airport last Monday and claimed that it was in "beyond poor condition" and should remain closed to takeoffs and landings.

In order to get the FAA to pay for fixing up the airport, the town needs to move as quickly as possible in making decisions for the master plan of the airport. Once they do that, they can show them a list of potential projects that the town can get funding from the FAA.

The plot thickens, however. Residents around the airport are in great support of keeping the runway closed because they don't like the noise that the planes make. So the town has also been getting support for keeping the runway closed. They are also bringing up other runways in question, such as runway number 16-24, the secondary runway, which has been described to be in "poor" condition.

What's a good government to do?

It certainly is remarkable to see how much red tape has to be cut through in order to get something done. All we are talking about is paving a runway, people. It's not a big deal. Can you imagine if there were these kinds of safety hazards on Main Street in East Hampton? There would be workers there fixing up the problem so fast it would be ridiculous. They'd put up some detour signs and pave it sparkling new before Memorial Day weekend hit. But if you have an airplane that you want to fly around, you don't get the royal treatment.

What's it going to take to get this thing paved, a plane crash? I sure hope not. But one would think that the greatest summer destination in the entire world, not country, but world, would have the ability to quickly pave over an airport runway so people can safely fly in on their Lear Jets. Maybe there are other motives at work. Maybe we like watching the jet set have a bumpy ride into town. After all, who do these people think they are, having the ability to come out to the Hamptons without battling the traffic on the LIE?

that the Board is going to offer the Interim Rabbi job to a man who once resigned after being accused of a sexually related charge. This resignation happened six years ago and referred to a matter that occurred ten years ago. Nothing was ever proved, and the charges, whatever they were, were never made public.

I spoke to members of the Search Committee for the Board and was told that there are five people up for consideration for the job of rabbi at the Jewish Center. They haven't decided upon one yet, though surely they would before the deadline of July 1, and this man is among those under consideration.

"We will have to learn the nature of these charges and determine if they are of consequence or not before we go farther with him," a search committee member told me. "If we determine they are of consequence, we will eliminate him from the search. If we are unable to find these things out, we will also eliminate him from the search. If they are of modest consequence, we will probably continue to consider him, considering it was all so long ago."

I commented that for the sake of the institution, I hoped that all bitterness be put behind them. There are 21 members of the Board. He commented that "there will surely be some resignations before this is over."

Well, somebody's got to be in charge of the place, and there will be. Who is on the Board would be an internal matter, however, and not of interest to this newspaper.

Generally, Dan's Papers does not concern itself with the internal affairs of a religious institution. We do become interested when it involves a town or village. Though that was not the case here, the matter was quite extraordinary and threatening to tear the place apart, and we felt the public needed to know what was going on. I do believe now that this matter is concluded and the Jewish Center can go forward.

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK

A Quiet Campus

With No Commencement Speech, Heeeeere's Vonnegut

Because Southamptton College is in transition between two universities and not fully open this year, there will be no big commencement ceremony here. To fill this void and solve your craving for a commencement speech, we report on a speech made to students at Ohio State by Sagaponack's Kurt Vonnegut last spring. Here it is.

By Harvey Wasserman

On a cold, cloudy night, the lines threaded all the way around the Ohio State campus. News that Kurt Vonnegut was speaking at the Ohio Union prompted these "apathetic" heartland college students to start lining up in the early afternoon. About 2,000 got in to the Ohio

Union. At least that many more were turned away. It was the biggest crowd for a speaker here since Michael Moore.

In an age dominated by hype and sex, neither Moore nor Vonnegut seems a likely candidate to rock a campus whose biggest news has been the men's and women's basketball teams' joint assault on Big Ten championships.

But maybe there's more going on here than Fox wants us to think.

Vonnegut takes an easy chair across from Prof. Manuel Luis Martinez, a poet and teacher of writing. He grabs Martinez and semi-whispers into his ear (and the mike)

"What can I say here?"

Martinez urges candor.

"Well," says Vonnegut, "I just want to say that George W. Bush is the syphilis president."

The students seem to agree.

"The only difference between Bush and Hitler," Vonnegut adds, "is that Hitler was elected."

"You all know, of course, that the election was stolen. Right here."

Off to a flying start, Vonnegut explains that this will be his "last speech for money." He can't remember the first one, but it was on a campus long, long ago, and this will be the

PROSTITUTES? GO AWAY. I'M GOING TO SLEEP

By Grant Carlos MacMurray

It seems that prostitution is no longer only for major cities such as Las Vegas and Atlantic City. Two weeks ago, the world's oldest profession (a euphemism, I'll admit, I've never really understood) reared its head in the once sleepy town of East Hampton. Several people were arrested in conjunction with what is being called a "prostitution ring." The ring was allegedly masterminded by a brother and sister team with the surname Moreno. The Moreno "Gang," if you will, was foiled by vigilant neighbors whose quick thinking and sharp eye for detail noticed that the traffic in and out of the house on Barry Lane in Maidstone Park was suspiciously steady. The Morenos, recent émigrés from Colombia, have protested their innocence, claiming not to have been in residence at the house. However, a police search unearthed such evidence as seized cash, business records and certain "paraphernalia" of the trade (which modesty prevents one from mentioning — some variety of fragrant bath oils, I imagine). The Morenos were saddled with a hefty bail of $30,000 dollars each, with those of the alleged prostitutes set at $2,500 a piece. Depending on how diversified their portfolios, or just how crafty they were in squirreling away the cash, it is unlikely that they will make bail, unless, of course, business was booming beyond what even the most vigilant neighbors and civic minded looky-loues were able to ascertain. The Morenos, speaking through interpreters, said that they were out East, "looking for work."

With urban sprawl and the influence of television (especially such borderline premium channels as HBO), there has followed something of a proliferation outward of big city ideas and depravity best kept in big cities. The urbane, the urban, and a certain stranglehold end.

The students are hushed with the prospect of the final appearance of America's greatest living novelist. Alongside Mark Twain and Ben Franklin, Will Rogers and Joseph Heller and a very short list of immortal satirists and storytellers, there stands Kurt Vonnegut, author of SLAUGHTERHOUSE FIVE and SIRENS OF TITAN, CAT'S CRADLE and GOD BLESS YOU, MR. ROSEWATER, books these students are studying now, as did their parents, as will their children and grandchildren, with a deeply felt mixture of gratitude and awe.

Nobody tonight seems to think they were in for a detached, scholarly presentation from a disengaged academic genius coasting on his incomparable laurels.

"I'm lucky enough to have known a great president, one who really cared about ALL the people, rich and poor. That was Franklin D. Roosevelt. He was rich himself, and his class considered him a traitor.

"We have people in this country who are richer than whole countries," he says. "They run everything.

"We have no Democratic Party. It's financed by the same millionaires and billionaires as the Republicans.

"So we have no representatives in Washington. Working people have no leverage whatsoever.

"I'm trying to write a novel about the end of the world. But the world is really ending! It's becoming more and more uninhabitable because of our addiction to oil.

"Bush used that line recently," Vonnegut adds. "I should sue him for plagiarism."

Things have gotten so bad, he says, "people are in revolt against life itself."

Our economy has been making money, but "all the money that should have gone into research and development has gone into executive compensation. If people insist on living as if there's no tomorrow, there really won't be one.

"As the world is ending, I'm always glad to be entertained for a few moments. The best way to do that is with music. You should practice once a night.

"If you really want to hurt your parents and don't want to be gay, go into the arts," he says.

Then he breaks into song, doing a passable, tender rendition of "Stardust Memories."

By this time this packed hall has grown reverential. The sound system is appropriately tenuous. Straining to hear every word is both an effort and a meditation.

"To hell with the advances in computers," he says after he finishes singing. "YOU are supposed to advance and become, not the computers. Find out what's inside you. And don't kill anybody.

"There are no factories any more. Where are the jobs supposed to come from? There's nothing for people to do anymore. We need to ask the Seminoles: 'what the hell did you do?' after the tribe's traditional livelihood was taken away."

Answering questions written in by students, he explains the meaning of life. "We should be kind to each other. Be civil. And appreciate the good moments by saying 'If this isn't nice, what is?'"

"You're awful cute," he says to someone in the front row. He grins and looks around. "If this isn't nice, what is?"

"You're all perfectly safe, by the way. I took off my shoes at the airport. The terrorists hate the smell of feet.

"We are here on Earth to fart around," he explains, and then embarks on a soliloquy about the joys of going to the store to buy an envelope. One talks to the people there, comments on the "silly-looking dog," finds all sorts of adventures along the way.

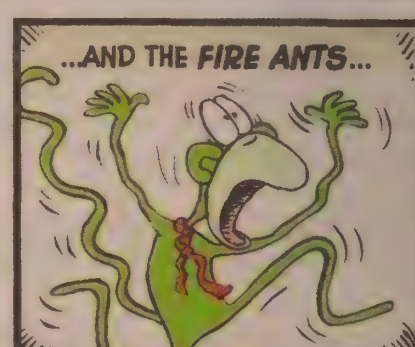

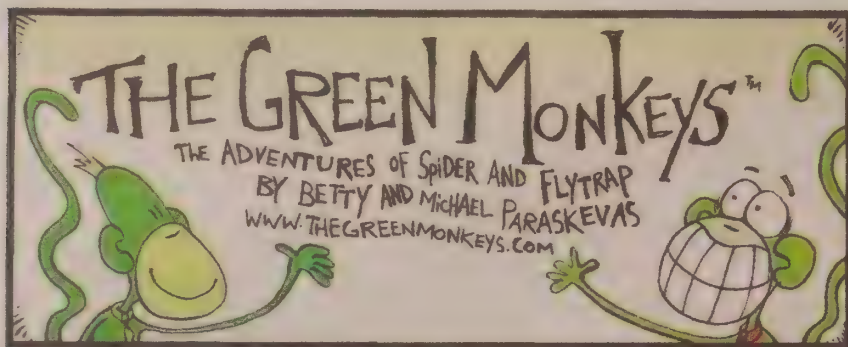

As for being a Midwesterner, he recalls his roots in nearby Indianapolis, a heartland town, the next one west of here. "I'm a fresh water person. When I swim in the ocean, I feel like I'm swimming in chicken soup. Who wants to swim in flavored water?"

A key to great writing, he adds, is to "never use semi-colons. What are they good for? What are you supposed to do with them? You're reading along, and then suddenly, there it is. What does it mean? All semi-colons do is suggest you've been to college."

Make sure, he adds, "that your reader is having a good time. Get to the who, when, where, what right away, so the reader knows what is going on."

As for making money, "war is a very profitable thing for a few people. Jesus used to be

Wild by Nature

Give a Free Lecture at the Remarkable New Food Store

By Emily J Weitz

"Eating organic" is one of those phrases that everyone's heard but many don't have the ability to practice. Sometimes it's hard to find good organic products, and many people can't afford the prices. But there are many arguments for eating organic foods, from the fresher taste to the lack of chemicals to the supporting of local farmers. However, organic and natural grocers are only recently becoming widespread. Out in the Hamptons, we are yet to have a large-scale natural supermarket. Until now.

When I heard that a new health food store, Wild By Nature, would be opening in Hampton Bays, my excitement was piqued. If more people have access to wholesome foods, then more people will be living healthy lifestyles. And when it comes to fresh local produce, sushi-grade fish, and fresh-squeezed juices, one can really never get enough. But when I learned a little more about this new venue, I realized it was much more than just another health-food store. With a wide range of services, Wild By Nature is an asset to the community.

Wild By Nature is a subsidiary of King Kullen, which was founded in 1930 by Michael

Cullen. The first King Kullen opened out of a warehouse in Queens, and it quickly grew into America's first supermarket. King Kullen has always prided itself on its relationship with its employees. It was one of the first major stores to offer vacation days and insurance. It remains family-controlled and operated. In my family, King Kullen remains the place for the cases, is imported from around the world. Wild By Nature supports local farmers by purchasing Long Island produce whenever it is available, both conventional and organic. They pride themselves on a strong relationship with the Long Island Farm Bureau.

For all the kayaking, biking, hiking, and other exercise the East End has to offer, it's amazing that a large-scale health-food store hasn't opened before. Granted, there is nothing like buying local, and the farm stands bring their fresh produce right to the roadside. However, sometimes you crave raspberries in winter. Sometimes you want squash in the spring. Without doing any damage to the business at local farm stands, Wild By Nature fills a void in the market.

But beyond all of this, Wild By Nature offers an invaluable service in its current locations, and plans to offer this at the Hampton Bays store. A separate room, called the Lecture Room, will be devoted to the sharing of knowledge and ideas. Anyone in the community is invited to give a lecture or demonstration, as long as it falls into the category of mind, body, or spirit. This is strictly for com-major shopping excursions. With this as its foundation, Wild By Nature was born in East Setauket in 1985.

The philosophy behind Wild By Nature is that food should support life, promote well being, and protect the world's natural resources. All of their food products are either all-natural or certified organic. Their produce comes from all over the country and, in some

However, you will be allowed to bring business cards and informational brochures to promote goods or services. Above all, this forum, open to the public, gives space to share ideas and learn from each other.

Lecturers simply contact the Wild By Nature office, which will determine whether the topic is appropriate for the Lecture Room. Once approved, the seminar will be promoted in the Wild By Nature circular, and interested customers will be asked to sign up in advance.

Wild By Nature has sponsored this kind of community service in its other stores as well. Topics range from personal hygiene to reducing your stress. For example, on Thursday, May 25th, Dr. Linda Eisen will speak at the Huntington location. She will explain well-researched techniques of breathing, meditation, posture, diet, and exercise that can help reduce your stress levels.

Then, at the Setauket location, Christine Lynn Harvvey will talk about Energy Medicine. She will cover such topics as the seven chakras and what each means, color therapy, and sound and hands-on healing.

This kind of "safe" zone, where the common goal is wellness, is something our community needs more of. Wild By Nature will also sponsor cooking classes, skin and hair analyses, and many more opportunities to bring the community together in the spirit of wellness. The Grand Opening of the Hampton Bays location will take place on May 20, just in time to usher in another summer season. Co-President Joe Brown speaks for himself, his business partner, Joe Forte, and the eager team at Wild By Nature when he says, "Wild by Nature is thrilled to be coming to Hampton Bays. We have had many requests to open a store in the Hamptons area and we feel that this store serves a need expressed by the communities throughout the East End of Long Island." Prostitutes (continued from page 27) of vice are sweeping the once quiet and modest little Hamlets of the Republic. The fastness of helicopters, Priuses and that all time corrupter, information, are systematically whacking away at places where these kinds of desultory activities have simply never existed before. Now, you may think me naive, but I assert, and firmly, that America needs some place to isolate itself from the ugliness of the rest of the world (especially Los Angeles). Why do you suppose, after all, that the Dutch made the trip (according to Washington Irving) to such remote locales as Sleepy Hollow? To sleep! They were getting tired of being Europe's foremost pre-industrial trading nation and they just wanted to nod off with a cup of grog to the soothing sounds of nine-pins being played, and sleep for, oh, twenty years or so. I assert that some places should simply be off-limits to poorly managed bordellos and the nuisances they cause. I boldly contend that to beat our current problems we must be strong enough as a nation to say, "This is all too much for me, I'm going to bed."

Too large a premium is placed today on being awake. I mean, come on, is what goes on at your office so very important that it requires every granule of your focus from clock in to clock out? I'm sure I'll be shouted down in the public gallery, but shouldn't we all collectively as a nation, slink off somewhere and take a nap? Should we flip over the "Open" sign on the Statue of Liberty and take the big red phone off the hook for when France calls? Most people would say, 'No,' but I contend that these folks are far too in love with vice. A person who really detests such unsavory elements as prostitution knows that the best way to handle such things is to don your conical shaped night-cap with the fuzzy ball at the end of it, yawn, and say, "I'm bushed. Can it wait until tomorrow?" Of course it can.

Who's Here

By Debbie Tuma

Although he's had an interest in food since his childhood, growing up with a mother and grandmother who loved cooking, Mark Smith never dreamed he'd one day own six successful restaurants.

Today, Smith, 51, is a partner in Nick & Toni's, Rowdy Hall, La Fondita, and Villa Italian Specialties, all located in East Hampton, as well as Nick & Toni's Café, located in Manhattan. He is also involved in starting yet another new restaurant, located in the former Alison By the Beach Restaurant, on Montauk Highway in Sagaponack, which is scheduled to open this fall, with a new name to be announced.

But Smith will be the first to say that his life has taken many turns on his way to becoming a restaurateur, from athletics, to clothing manufacturing, to chef school, to business management. But the one common thread through all his work was his entrepreneurial spirit.

"I had my own landscaping business from age 16 to 18," he said. "I actually started working at the age of 12, when I had my first newspaper route, then I worked at a Carvel stand, and off and on I also worked in restaurants, such as the Salty Dog in Uniondale, as a dishwasher and late night cook." As a young boy growing up in Merrick in Nassau County, he also loved to watch his mother and grandmother cook, and he had an interest in recipes, collecting numerous cookbooks. Smith's family was in the sock business, in Manhattan, and they have owned a house in Montauk since the 1960s, when Smith began coming here to surf and play at the beach.

When it came time to go to college, Smith attended Syracuse University, with the ultimate goal of becoming a lawyer, which his family encouraged as a secure future. But he left after two years, after a failed attempt to get a lacrosse scholarship. He returned to Long Island, where he worked in a lumberyard and drove a truck for a year. He then returned to college at the State University of Brockport, where he earned a degree in Psychology in 1977, and got married the day after graduation.

"At that time, my Dad had just started a new sock business and asked if I'd join him, in Tennessee, since all the mills were in the South," he explained. "We lived in Chattanooga, and I commuted to Fort Payne, Alabama, where I learned the clothing manufacturing business. I found the southern people to be very friendly and welcoming."

Smith moved back to New York City in the early 1980s, to get more involved with the sales and marketing part of his father's business. Soon after, his father sold his company to a public company named Adams-Millis, which was later bought by Sara Lee Corporation, which also owns Hanes and Coach companies.

"My Dad retired, and I stayed working for Sara Lee, until I eventually realized that the corporate environment wouldn't allow me to be entrepreneurial," said Smith. "At the time, I realized I didn't want to stay in the corporate world, so I quit my position in the sock business, and decided to follow my long-held passion for food. I enrolled in the Peter Kump's Cooking School, in Manhattan, with the idea of finally becoming a chef, in the late 1980s."

While going to cooking school, Smith got a job managing Jerry's Restaurant on Manhattan's Upper West Side, and during this stint, he began to realize that maybe he was more suited to management.

"I quickly realized that being a chef was more a job for a young guy, and here I was already 40 years old," said Smith. "With my business background, I thought managing a restaurant would be easier, but then I decided what I really wanted, eventually, was to have my own restaurant."

Smith also decided to write a letter to Jeff Salaway, who owned Nick & Toni's Restaurant in East Hampton, stating his interest in working with him, and Smith became his assistant manager.

"We hit it off, and then there was an opening at his take-out Mediterranean and North African place in the city called Honest Foods, and he asked if I'd help him get that place off the ground, which I did," recalled Smith. "Then, in 1996, when O'Malley's lost their lease, near the East Hampton movie theater, Jeff asked me if I wanted to open a place with him, and we opened Rowdy Hall together. We got the name from local author Steven Gaines, who did research on the history of East Hampton for one of his books, and found out it was on the site of a former boarding house for artists. We thought Rowdy Hall would be an appropriate name for this fun, local pub, to come for drinks and conversation."

Smith said he and Salaway, who died in a car crash in 2001, envisioned a 'community place where people could come without a reservation, have a casual beer or steak, and hang out."

"This meeting house pub was the beginning of our partnership, which was a very good one," said Smith. "Jeff and I had very different strengths and weaknesses — he was the front man, who schmoozed with the public, but he didn't like the hiring and firing, and the daily administrative things, which was my forte."

They eventually changed the Honest Foods place in the city to the current Nick & Toni's Café, and they opened La Fondita, a take-out Mexican restaurant in Amagansett, in 2001.

Smith said that when Jeff Salaway died, on Labor Day Weekend of 2001, "It was a very was also going through a divorce, and my father-in-law, whom I was close to, died at an early age."

The combination of these emotional events caused Smith to rethink his future, where he was going, and what he wanted out of life. "I scary time for me — I lost my business partner and my best friend. It was also scary for our business partners and customers. And it was also terrible for our families.”

Smith said, of the sad and hard part of trying to continue the restaurants without Salaway, “I don’t know if he was aware of what a strong philosophy and legacy he had, as the underpinnings of all these restaurants, that we were able to continue them to this day. And they’re as good as they’ve ever been.”

He said this is because, “Jeff developed a really strong, loyal, familial group of employees, and also customers, around these businesses. Working restaurants becomes more like being part of a family, because we all spend more time with each other than we do with our wives and kids. It’s due to these bonds that we were able to move forward.”

In 2002, Smith and his partners bought the Villa Italian Specialties, known to many as “The Pork Store.” They also just closed on the old Alison By the Beach, which will open by October.

When asked what the key to his success and longevity with these restaurants is, Smith quipped, “It’s a combination of many things, including our great, committed employees, which is the backbone of this business; our consistency of management, who stay and grow with us; and also our commitment to using only fresh, local produce in our food. We buy from the small farms and fishermen, and we even have our own organic garden, at Nick & Toni’s. Lastly, we don’t try to be all things to all people. Each of our places has a strong, unique identity. You won’t find pasta at Rowdy Hall, and you won’t find Tex-Mex at La Fondita. “We have a strong definition and authenticity about who we are, and I have also learned this in the process of growing with these restaurants.”

so merciful and loving of the poor. But now he’s a Republican.

“Our economy today is not capitalism. It’s casino-ism. That’s all the stock market is about. Gambling.

“Live one day at a time. Say ‘if this isn’t nice, I don’t know what is!’

“You meet saints everywhere. They can be anywhere. They are people behaving decently in an indecent society.

“I’m going to sue the cigarette companies because they haven’t killed me,” he says. His son lived out his dream to be a pilot and has spent his career flying for Continental. Now they’ve “screwed up his pension.”

The greatest peace, Vonnegut wraps up,

“comes from the knowledge that I have enough. Joe Heller told me that.

“I began writing because I found myself possessed. I looked at what I wrote and I said ‘How the hell did I do that?’

“We may all be possessed. I hope so.”

He accepts the students’ standing ovation with characteristic dignity and grace. Not a few tears flow from young people with the wisdom to appreciate what they are seeing. “If this isn’t nice, we don’t know what is.”

Not long ago we spoke on the phone. I asked Kurt how he was. “Too fucking old,” he replied.

Maybe so. But the mind and soul are still there, powerful and penetrating as ever. Just as they’ll ever be in his books and stories and the precious records of his wonderful talks.

Thankfully, Kurt Vonnegut is still possessed by the genius of seeing and describing the world as only Kurt Vonnegut can.

He is still sharp and clear, full of love and life and light. May he be with us yet for a long long time to come.

Guild Hall's 68th annual Artist Members Exhibit has announced its winners. The judge, Magdalena Dabrowski, a consultant on contemporary art at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in Manhattan, awarded best in show to Jane Martin for her "Shelter-Sky." Best photograph went to Fazzaa Fezza for a double picture of two statuesque nuns crossing the Brooklyn Bridge with the World Trade Center towers in the background. Mica Invisible Marder won best sculpture for his bronze "Bull." The Theo Hios Landscape Award went to Anne Sager for her amusing "Christo Dresses the Sky," a cloudscape with each cloud dressed up with a black bow tie. Jason T. Poremba's "Word Game," a collage of torn boxes from vintage toys and board games in pleasing reds, peaches, beiges, and a shot of green, won for best mixed media work. Claire Heimark won for best abstract and Joy Goldkind won for best representational work. Congratulations to all!

Paris Hilton, part-time resident of Southampton, unveiled her new video game last week at the Electronic Entertainment Expo. As she greeted throngs of fans and photographers the heiress said, "I'm really excited to have my new video game, "Diamondquest." Unfortunately, the game is called, "Paris Hilton's Jewel Jam."

Hamptonite Lizzie Grubman and her hubby Chris Stern are expecting. Grubman sources say she's hoping for a little girl — maybe another "Power Girl," like the ones in her MTV reality show. May your child be born healthy, tan, and with a strict guest list in hand.

The Ann Liguori American Cancer Society Celebrity Golf Classic, hosted by sportscaster Ann Liguori, will be held at Hampton Hills Golf and Country Club in Westhampton on Monday, June 26. Nearly $1 million has been raised for cancer research, education advocacy and patient and family services since its inception nine years ago. Among the celebrities expected to attend are actors Tony LoBianco and Jack McGee (FX's "Rescue Me" show); former NY Yankees catcher Rick Cerone and the team's goodwill ambassador, Gene Michael; Kenny "The Real" Kramer; retired New York Jets stars Gerry Philbin and John Nitti; WNBC-TV news journalists Dr. Max Gomez and Jane Hanson; Hall of Fame Billiard's star Eva 'the Striking Viking' Laurance; and former NY Mets player Art Shamsky.

Jack Black, star of King Kong, and a member of the Frat Pack, just shot a layout for Premiere Magazine in Amagansett at the ocean-front home of Nancy Grigor, head of Hamptons Locations, and her husband, international lawyer Michael J. Griffith. Black is in the as yet unnamed movie being shot in Hampton Bays starring Nicole Kidman and Jennifer Jason Leigh and directed by Noah Baumbach.

Some of the biggest players in show business, such as CBS, Walt Disney and Viacom Inc., are up in arms over a federal proposal that media companies make the salaries of non-executives, such as actors and TV news anchors, public information. The Securities and Exchange Commission's "Katie Couric Clause," as it is known due to the multi-million dollar package the Today Show veteran and Hamptonite commanded to defect to CBS News, is intended to give shareholders in publicly traded companies more information about the dispersal of corporate assets.

The ongoing custody battle with former wife Kim Basinger has been an arduous time for Hamptonite Alec Baldwin but Superior Court Commissioner Maren E. Nelson gave the actor some good news last week, just in time for Father's Day. Baldwin was granted three extra visitation days with his 10-year-old daughter, Ireland, either over Memorial Day or for Father's Day. Perhaps the reunited Father/Daughter duo will spend the time at his Hamptons estate.

Sir Paul McCartney, ex-Beatle, activist and Hampton resident, has hit stormy times. During his world tour to promote his new solo album "Chaos and Creation in the Back Yard," he fell through a trapdoor and injured himself. Recently rumors spread that his marriage to Heather Mills McCartney is on the brink of collapse when it was reported that they spent five days apart after a heated argument. After a solo trip to France, the ex-Beatle returned to his home alone last week. While Mills, a former model, recovers from surgery, she denies all rumors vehemently. But a spokesman for McCartney said, "I don't think they are with each other." If the couple separates, Heather will be entitled to a substantial chunk of Sir Paul's £825 million fortune as the pair refused to sign a pre-nuptial agreement prior to their marriage in 2002.

A.M. Rosenthal, 84

By Dan Rattiner

Abe Rosenthal, the Pulitzer Prize-winning foreign correspondent, who retired from the New York Times as its editor to spend his final days living and writing in Manhattan and to spend time at his vacation home in Bellport with his faithful wife Shirley Lord, has died at the age of 84. He was a well-known figure in these parts, and in retirement, he continued to write for the Times, with an editorial column called "On My Mind." He wrote the first of these columns in January of 1987 and the last of them in November 1999. The first and last both bore the same headline: Please Read This Column. From 2000 to 2004, he wrote an untitled column for the New York Daily News.

Abe Rosenthal was born the son of a Canadian trapper in Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario.

Both his parents were born in Byelorussia. He was the youngest of six children. As a teenager, by this time living in New York, he developed osteomyelitis in his legs. He suffered from the effects of this disease all his life.

I met Abe Rosenthal briefly in 1964, when I worked in the City Room of the New York Times as a runner. He was sort of my hero at the time. He was an informal, combative and honorable man who had won a Pulitzer Prize for his work in Communist Poland during the Cold War. With his rumpled and feisty appearance, he was quite a contrast to the rest of the suits at that newspaper. He wrote daring and revealing articles about the Polish regime and predicted he would be thrown out of the country. He was. Back in New York City, three years later, he was named Metropolitan Editor of the Times, and soon, by driving his reporting staff hard, he eventually was named Executive Editor, the title for the man who runs the whole editorial section of that paper. His writers covered the War in Vietnam, the Pentagon Papers scandal, Watergate and the Middle East. His reign at the Times lasted until 1986 and during that time the paper grew in both size and importance. It also became more financially successful. He believed his job during this era was as guardian of the tradition of that newspaper. He called his employment at that newspaper "my life." He was there 55 years.

I last saw Abe Rosenthal about six years ago at a benefit honoring John Adam Kanas at the Whitefield. He asked me if I had read his latest column in the Daily News and I said I hadn't. You should, he said. •

preview: the 11th hour

By Christian McLean

Since Man began telling stories, Man told stories of war. The earliest account, Homer's Iliad, depicts the greatest battle to ever see the shores of Greece. It is a tale that turned men into heroes and heroes into legends. Later, the great tribes of Athens and Sparta earned the honor of the fiercest warriors of antiquity. This is the history of Greece. From Romans to the Turks and Ottomans the country has seen countless wars and fought untold invaders. And as we look to the ancient history for idols, we sometimes forget the more recent heroes.

War literature and films capture our minds because they placed normal people in unbelievable circumstances. They evoke nationalist pride, a sense of strength we would hope to have if ever placed in those conditions, and they tell a story of survival. We turn to The 11th Day for all these reasons. But, unlike the Iliad, the story of these warriors is told by the men, women and children who fought in the war — the ones who battled German occupation with hoes and shovels, with their bare hands.

Like parasols, 8,100 Fallschirmjager (elite Nazi paratroopers) descend on the Isle of Crete in May of 1941. Their only resistance was Cretan civilians; farmers and shopkeepers. The initial plan to take over the island was scheduled for one or two days. It never happened.

The 11th Day, a film directed and co-produced by Christos Epperson and written and co-produced by Michael Epperson, captures a story which isn't as well known as the Battle of the Bulge or Carentan, but played a pivotal role in WWII and modern Greek history. Through interviews with actual members of the Cretan resistance movement we see how this small island was able to do something that neither the Greek or French armies could do — fend off the Germans. Within the first 48 hours of the Fallschirmjager landing, over half of them were either killed or wounded. By 1944, over 100,000 German troops were on Crete, and yet, the men, women and children continued fighting, keeping the Nazi forces at bay and tallied the capture of the only German general in the entirety of WWII with the help of British Special Operations officer Patrick Leigh Fermor, who, for the first time in over fifty years, addresses the events that occurred on this little Greek island.

The 11th Day has been hailed as a treasure to the memories of those who lost their lives, as well as a tribute to Cretan fortitude. The film, which was financially backed by Alex Spanos, owner of the San Diego Chargers, and created by two brothers on a skeleton budget, has stunned audiences throughout the United States and abroad. A tribute to the "greatest generation," this is a stirring piece of filmmaking.

This May marks the 65th anniversary of the battle of Crete. In honor of the occasion, The 11th Day will be shown on Sunday, May 21st at 8 p.m. at the Parrish Hall of Southampton Hospital. The showing, sponsored by the Greek Orthodox Church of the Hamptons, is a fundraiser to benefit USC Shoah Foundation (Holocaust project) and the Greek cultural center of the Hamptons. On hand will be Daisy Miller, Director of Development at the Shoah Institute, a Holocaust survivor, who will speak about the work of Institute. The entire evening will be hosted by Father Alexander Karloutsos of the Greek Orthodox Church.

Tickets are $25 and can be reserved by calling 1-877-877-7677. The Parrish Hall at Southampton Hospital is located at 240 Meeting House Lane, Southampton.

TWENTYSOMETHING... By David Lion Rattiner

Grandmothers and Computers

Sometimes it just hits you how much has changed, especially when your Grandmother asks you a computer question. I was on my cell phone with my grandmother last Sunday, wishing her a happy Mother's Day. My grandmother lives in Florida, she is 92 and she has a ridiculous amount of knowledge, when it comes to life and people. You ask my Grandma a question about history, she knows it. You could go as far as calling this woman a genius. However, she is not too bright when it comes to the Internet.

"Hi Grammy, it's Dave."

"David! How are you, sweetheart? Things are going well for you?"

"Yeah, things are going pretty good. Summer is here and I think that it is really going to be great. I just wanted to give you a call and wish you a happy Mother's Day. After all, I don't think that I would be on this planet right now if it wasn't for you."

"Well, that's true."

"So I guess I owe you a phone call."

Every time I talk to this woman I just think to myself how weird it must be for her to see not only her own son grow up, but for her son's son to grow up. I think it is weird knowing that my little sister is turning sixteen this year.

"Listen, David, sweetheart. I need your advice. I'm having trouble with my computer. I have WebTV, I'm thinking about getting rid of it."

If you don't know already, WebTV is a business that combines your television with your computer. It's a very old idea, really invented for people who feel uncomfortable using a computer but are comfortable with a television. Very few people have it today, mainly because it sucks. It's slow, and using a regular computer is faster and easier once you learn it. But my Grandmother hasn't gotten that far yet.

"I think that you really need to get rid of it. Nobody uses WebTV. You need to get yourself a real computer and get on the Internet. It's like purchasing a new television or cell phone these days. You shouldn't be intimidated by it."

"I think it's all witchcraft!"

My grandmother was the first female graduate of Brooklyn Law School to be named valedictorian. And she did it with the highest grades ever gotten at the school. She knows more about world politics, law and English (she always beats me at Scrabble) than anyone I know. Yet she's leery of the Internet. It's hilarious. I don't think that there is anything else in the world that scares her. You tell my grandmother that a hurricane is coming to Florida, she tells you that she'll sleep through it by taking out her hearing aids.

"You shouldn't be so intimidated by computers Grammy, they aren't that big of a deal. You should get a new computer and learn how to..."

"I think that I have learned enough in my life. Just listen to me. I just need to know how to get rid of this spam on my computer. Is there an organization I can call to make a complaint? I need them to stop sending me these e-mails. Every time I open up my e-mail it says I have a thousand new e-mails, but in reality, I only have two or three. All of the rest are e-mails that are trying to sell me Viagra pills.

It's terrible."

"Well, that's a part of life, I think. You don't have to read them. Just don't open the ones that are spam. The computer should automatically delete them after a while."

"Yes, I know that, but I just think that it looks messy on the screen."

"Try not to let it get to you."

"You know, I think that computers have caused us nothing but trouble, I really do."

"Yeah, me too. Uh oh, Grammy. My cell phone is dying. I have to go."

"You know, I have a regular phone and I never have this problem."

"I'll call you later, I love you."

"I love you too, honey. Take really good care of yourself. And send me a real letter sometime. I don't think e-mail is very much fun."

"Okay, I will."

Grandmothers are the best.

The Sheltered Island By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Island #399 Choose Your Weapon....

In the process of choosing young veggie plants for my garden in recent weeks, I have had several conversations about garden security, a major theme on Shelter Island.

Over planting: Planting all you want and extra for the deer on the theory that even after the deer eat all they want, you'll have enough left for yourself. Excellent theory, but when the deer find a nice big cache of food, they don't keep the location to themselves, no, no, no...deer are stupid, they tell their friends and soon you have three times the number of deer coming through your yard.

Fencing: The obvious and easy answer, but... Shelter Island has so many rules and regulations about what kind of fencing you can use, it's like trying to understand the federal tax codes. The fence can't injure the animals it's trying to keep out and it can't be too high in case it looks offensive to absolutely anyone driving by. The best fence would be about five feet high with razor wire on the top, or nasty poison-tipped spikes, but noooooo..... somebody, who shouldn't be near your garden stealing squash in the first place, might get injured, so no razor wire or poison tipped spikes.

Wagon planting: My mother-in-law does this. I don't know if anyone on the Island does it, but it's really smart. You buy old kiddie wagons and plant your veggies in them. This gives you a mobile garden! You can bring the garden in at night. Or hide your plants anyway you want. The added benefit is you can garden from your lawn chair. Just wheel the wagon up and start digging.

Hanging Gardens: You can plant almost anything in hanging baskets. Not a bad idea if you have a big porch. You can hang your garden all around and sleep on the porch with a shotgun in case the deer try to come up the steps. The two positive side effects are; 1. you could have a freezer full of venison, 2. neighbors will never bother a man crazy enough to guard his zucchini with a shotgun.

Roof Top Gardening: I haven't seen this on the Island yet, but it's a matter of time. If you have a flat section of roof, with a little partial shade, what better location for a deer and rabbit proof garden? The roof isn't doing anything but covering your house, so why not put it to some real good use with a roof top garden? If the deer and bunnies manage to get a ladder and get into a roof top garden then we'll know for sure that Plum Island has been experimenting with their DNA....

El Camino Gardening: After roof top gardening, this is probably the best option for critter proof gardening. Buy an old El Camino and plant your garden in the back. This way you can keep an eye on your tomatoes wherever you go. Plus, how easy it will be to show off your garden if it's right there with you at the hardware store.

Seawall Gardening: Popular here on the Island, but only for locals. Pile clam shells and seaweed in three foot high walls around your garden with strings of decorative fly strips overhead. The smells of the sea products will obfuscate the smells of tender pea shoots and the confused deer will leave feeling foolish that they mistook a clambake for a garden. Naturally they won't mention it to their friends because that's just downright embarrassing for a deer to mistake the smell of seaweed for pea shoots.

Sherlock Holmes Garden: Sherlock Holmes said, "The best place to hide something is in plain sight." I believe that. I have a theory, not in any book, that deer can find gardens not only by smell but by pattern recognition. When they see straight lines of vegetation, they see buffet dinner. This year, I will be staggering my plantings to make them appear random. Plus, I'm surrounding my garden with big cat poop. Yes, you heard right.... 'google' it yourself, it's proving out in gardens across America. Deer instinctively avoid areas where they smell evidence of a natural predator like a big cat. Cougar poop is selling like hot cakes in California. I will be making my first poop purchase soon. I'm not sure about Cougar poop because the deer here are pretty smart and I know they've never seen a cougar, so I'm thinkin' Lion or Tiger....

away with it, so we'll just build it back up again to dominate the skyline? Yes? Well, then why not just build the Twin Towers exactly as they were, and continue to call the place the World Trade Center? Otherwise, I would suggest we build something that sort of blends into the rest of the landscape. Perhaps simply another skyscraper of about the same size and shape as the others, with a monument and plaque next to it where the towers came down. I'd go with that idea. Well, at least they did not to decide to call the Freedom Tower The New World Trade Center. Cooler and more cautious heads prevailed when it came to the name.

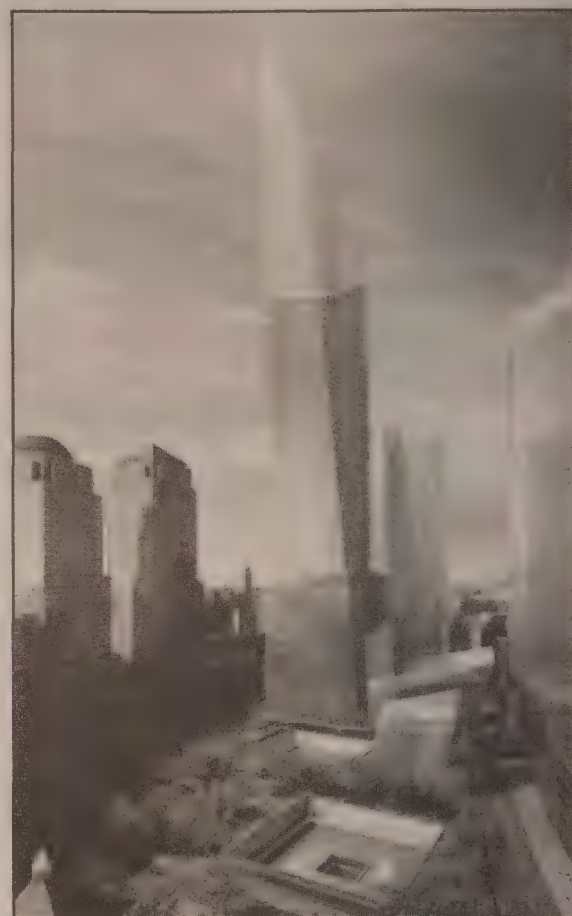

How much better it would have been, in my opinion, to have gracefully acknowledged we had taken a bad hit, gone after these people relentlessly until they were all up with the virgins, and then put a band aid over where the hit occurred and moved on.

But we didn't. Personally, I have two ideas about that tower rising to the year, in feet, in which the country was founded, thus easily becoming the world's tallest building. (If it were in London, by the way, they'd have built it up just 1066 feet. It would be below the radar. And they would have rented it.)

My first idea is to build the Freedom Tower 1776 feet up and then put a big gorilla at the top of it. It could be an animated, dancing, singing, giant gorilla up there, and I think it would melt the heart of even the most hard-hearted radical Muslim.

My second idea, if you don't like that one, would be to put up on top of the Freedom Tower a giant statue of the Prophet Muhammad, one without a bomb on his head. Honestly, I think this would be the very safest place to rent offices. Might even attract some Islamic church officials. Certainly it wouldn't get knocked down.

I told this to the man sitting next to me.

"Bartender, give this man a drink," he said.

The following morning, I told this second idea to another friend of mine and he said that was the worst thing, and the most offensive thing imaginable for Muslims.

"The whole reason they were upset with the cartoon Muhammad," he said, "was because it shows a likeness of the prophet. In Islam, showing a likeness of God or his Prophet is a blasphemy just on the face of it. Haven't you ever noticed that in Islam you never see drawings or paintings of the Creator?"

"Now that you mention it, yes."

"That's because Islam feels that showing an image of God is tending too much toward the worship of Idolatry. You don't even start in that direction."

Who knew? You know what? Why don't the radical Muslims list all the various things that upset them. Maybe saying the word "purple" will cause you to have your nose cut off. Or slaughtering a sheep could get you put away for ten lifetimes. There's got to be a list. We mean them no harm, and so we have to know what's what. Make the list please.

NOT A GOOD WAY TO TREAT THE TAXPAYERS

By Dan Rattiner

In the last miserable days of the old Soviet Union, people stood patiently in line in every big city of that country, waiting for their share of the largess, which might be a slice of bread or a scrap of chicken. They stood through rain and hail and snow and sun, but patiently. There was not much choice in the matter. And they had to get what they could. Communism would provide.

I was reminded of this scene this week when about 1,000 homeowners of the poor and impoverished town of Southampton lined up in the rain outside of St. Rosalie's Roman Catholic Church in Hampton Bays to wait patiently — because they had no choice in the matter — for the authorities to fill out the forms and issue the stamps and file their real estate tax grievance. It was raining on these poor impoverished people. No, I take that back. It was raining on these wealthy, well-to-do property owners of Southampton, formerly the middle class people of one of the wealthiest places in the country before all the real estate prices went up, and they were determined, and angry, and miserable and they would wait in that line as long as it took. Those coming out of the church told them that there were only four officials inside to take care of this huge gang of people. And it would take hours and hours, maybe days, for them all to be processed through.

"We'll wait," the people said.

The people were all waiting for exactly the same thing. They were there because they had received a notice that the appraisals of their properties had gone up. Some property taxes were going up from $4,000 a year to $6,000 a year. Some were going up from $7,000 to $19,000 a year. And the notices of these higher appraisals had arrived just the day before — another rainy day — and they were opened up and they revealed the information that they had been sent sometime in April, it was right there in the letterhead, and there would be just one chance to express a grievance that it might be unfair. May 15. Many of these people had opened their letters the day before May 15. A few had gotten them May 13. Not much time to prepare a case. And so they had all showed up, angry, on short notice, in the rain, waiting in line outside, clutching their letters and their tax assessment forms and their tax map documents and they waited.

"This is a disgrace," one soaking wet man on line said. "When's the next election in Southampton? Because we're gonna throw all these people out." He said his property appraisal had gone up 71%.

There was somebody there with a sign. FIS-CAL SODOMY, it read. LOCAL HARDWORKING HOMEOWNERS ARE TAKING IT UP THE A—. A mean sign, for a mean day.

The lines had formed earlier in the day in Southampton Town Hall, but when that overflowed the authorities said they would dispatch a crew of clerks to the church in Hampton Bays, and process grievances there. It was true, after all, that this was grievance day and it came only once a year. When the day was done, that would be it. Or so people thought.

"I have a house on 1/8 acre, 3,000 square feet of land, in the Southampton Town side of Sag Harbor. The assessment went from $237,000 to $688,300 in one year. Explain this."

One woman, whose property tax assessment was increased 75%, had an explanation. "There are all these trophy houses now on my street," she said. "So they must figure my house is worth the same as a trophy house."

There was a man on line in the rain who had driven all the way out from Manhattan. He had been given a number, which was 505, and now he was being told they would only take 500 people, but he would wait anyway. "I came all this way."

The people from the town government did the best they could with the crowds — about one in ten of all property owners had come to file a grievance, and they announced that if you had a partially filled out grievance you could just put it in this box they had, and if you couldn't get heard before the day was out they would give you another day.

"I know everybody's got something to say," a town official said. "And we want to hear it."

ing and takeoff, by building it with two vertical twin tails. It was the first of a long string of military aircraft to do that.

The first test flight of a Grumman F-14 took place at Calverton on December 21, 1970. It went well. A second test flight, on December 30, did not. As test pilots Robert Smyth and Bill Miller took it out over Westhampton and Quogue to the Atlantic Ocean to go through its paces, they experienced a complete failure of the primary hydraulic system. Able to operate gingerly on a backup system, they headed back to the airport at Calverton, managed to get it into position for landing, but then lost it. They ejected from the cockpit and came down by parachute alive. The plane crashed one mile short of the runway in a farm field and burned. There were no injuries, but that's how the second test of the first F-14 wound up.

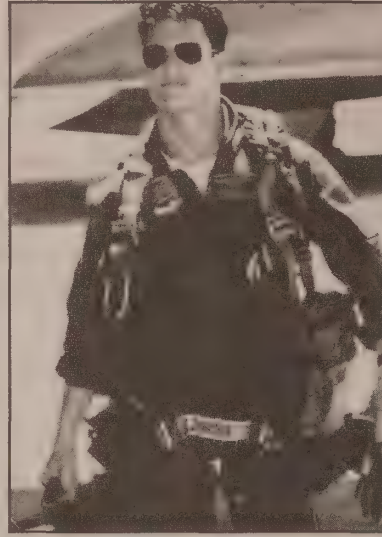

Engineers, examining the wreckage, concluded, correctly, as it turned out, that the hydraulics failure was caused by something called harmonic fatigue. Replacing the titanium tubes with stainless steel solved the problem.

In subsequent tests, F-14s fired missiles at test targets at Point Mugu, California, successfully used the swing wings to go supersonic over the Atlantic, and back in a test at Point Mugu, shot down six widely separated drones with six Phoenix missiles in 38 seconds. This feat has never been duplicated.

The military had for itself an amazing warplane. Top speed (the F-14 was among the fastest), maneuverability (the F-14 was as maneuverable as any lightweight jet), firepower (unmatched), sophistication (unmatched), acceleration (unmatched), weapons package (unmatched) and range (unmatched). In addition, it could land and take off from aircraft carriers, and could be reconfigured as a fighter-bomber. Surely it was, when everything was considered, by far the most formidable fighter plane ever built at that time. Grumman fans argue that for more than twenty years, it was essentially unmatched in its abilities. Five years ago, the Navy named the F-18 Hornet as the successor for the aging F-14. But the F-18, manufactured by Northrop/McDonnell Douglas in El Segundo, California, is only the equal of the F-14 technologically. It is just that, with other scientific advances, it is lighter, easier to operate and cheaper to build. In a face off in the sky, Top Gun-style, the F-14 and F-18 would be near to a standoff.

The F-14, after its tests and now known as the Tomcat, was accepted into the Navy's fleet in July of 1973. In April 1975, the F-14 gave air cover to the successful evacuation of Saigon. The ending of the Vietnam War thus marked the beginning of air combat for the F-14. It fired no shots. Its unit circled the area for much of the day, then returned to base.

Three years later, the Shah of Iran, a friend to President Nixon, went to the Paris Air Show and saw the F-14 in a fly-by. The Shah had, prior to that time, told Nixon about Soviet MIGs flying over Iranian airspace. What could he get to combat them? President Nixon offered the Shah the best he had: a choice of either the Navy F-14 or the Air Force F-15, a cheaper, less sophisticated and slower aircraft. The Shah opted for the F-14, and over the next two years, a total of 79 F-14s were sent to the Shah, accompanied by an army of executives and engineers to show the Iranians how to use the plane. The overflights by the MIGs stopped.

And so it was that, astonishingly, the only F-14s ever built that got handed over to a foreign government (712 were built in total, so more than 10% of them went to Iran) very shortly fell into unfriendly hands. Just one year after these F-14s were integrated into the Iranian air force, the Shah was overthrown by Muslim clerics, Americans working in the Embassy in Tehran were taken hostage, and the Ayatollah Khomeini, living in exile in France, came secretly to Tehran to take charge of the new government. As his pilots and engineers poured over the F-14 at a nearby military airport, Khomeini referred to the United States as "the Great Satan." President Carter went into seclusion and prayed.

As I have said, there were only two occasions that the F-14 fired its weapons in anger, and neither of them took place in Iran. The fact is that when the Grumman executives and engineers got hustled out to the airport and sent back to Long Island, the Iranians discovered they really couldn't figure out how to operate the F-14s. The Americans had left with all the service manuals. And, of course, there was no access to any spare parts. During the next few years, and in particular during the eight years (1980 to 1988) that Iran fought a border war with Iraq, our spy planes noted that although the F-14s were, on very rare occasions, able to take off, they at no time showed either maneuverability or armaments. To this day, it is believed that no Iranian was able to figure out how to use an F-14 sufficiently well enough to either arm it or fire its weapons. As of four years ago, there were still 29 F-14s operational in Iran, visible on tarmacs in that country.

In 1973, the government of Libya declared jurisdiction over a body of water called the Gulf of Sidra which, until that time, was considered international waters. In 1981, President Reagan sent a fleet of aircraft carriers to the Gulf, and soon noted that two Libyan SU-22 fighters, Russian made, had been scrambled and, fully armed, were heading their way. Two Black Aces F-14s, launched off one of the carriers, approached the two Libyan aircraft and demanded they turn around. When they did not, the Tomcat pilots fired two sidewinder missiles. And the Libyan planes went down into the sea. No further enemy fighters came to challenge the F-14s that day. And Libya abandoned their claim to the Gulf. At least for a while.

Libya renewed their claim to the Gulf in 1989, this time approaching American carriers with two highly rated MIG-23s. The results were the same.

Although the F-14 never again fired at another enemy aircraft (largely because there was nothing good enough to challenge them) the F-14 did have one other interesting mission. On October 10, 1985, hijackers took control of an Egyptair 737 commercial jet in the air. Seven F-14s were sent up and they intercepted the 737 and ordered it to land in Sigonella, Italy. The hijackers did so, and they surrendered both the passengers, and themselves there.

Last month, the Navy announced that it would phase out the F-14.

"The end of the Cold War lessened the need for a fighter escort or an interceptor," Sandlewski wrote.

Tomcats will remain in his memory and mine, however, and the memories of millions of people that came in contact with them over the years. Some will go into the National Museum of Naval Aviation in Pensacola, Florida. The last F-14 will fly sometime in the beginning of 2007.

Fundraiser For The Blues

Riverhead Blues Festival Raises Money At Atlantis Marine World In Riverhead

By R.B. Stuart

The 8th Annual Riverhead Blues Festival fundraiser last Saturday night at Atlantis Marine World was the fifth fundraiser Gary Graziano coordinated for the greatly anticipated summer event. Over 150 guests came out to show their support for the Blues Festival.

With a stuffed great white shark suspended overhead, Who Are Those Guys performed original Neil Young classics with the ease of seasoned professionals. The jazzy saxophone of The Hackensack Men and Trenton Horns bounced off the walls as a long stream of people stood at the grand buffet of Cajun food catered by The Atlantis Marine World chef, Sean Fountain and assistant director, Bob Lanieri who made sure people were having fun. The NRG Band wrapped the night up with whaling vocals.

Gary Graziano sits on the board of directors of The Long Island Blues Society and is the chairman of fundraising, "I got involved with the Blues Festival from attending them every year. Living in Riverhead I understand how important this festival is to others and me. In 2001 it was a shot in the dark, but I wanted to coordinate the fundraiser and loved it. With the help of the Atlantis Marine World as a venue, how could it not be a great thing? If this didn't happen this year, the Blues Festival would have been forgotten. Next year we're planning well in advance and in March you'll be hearing from us. We hope for more support because the festival is such a great community event for everyone, not just Riverhead," Graziano said.

Graziano was born in Brooklyn to a large family of 10. He relocated to Riverhead 28 years ago with his wife Mary-ellen and their seven kids. Graziano recently retired after 30 years as produce manager for King Kullen. In the 1950s his father, a second-generation Italian American, and his mother, born in Hungary of Jewish faith, fell in love at a young age and started a produce store on Long Island. The shop had a ton of character and life due to his mother who was the type of woman who was always working. In the morning she would be selling grapes, and in the afternoon she'd be driving a delivery truck and smoking a cigar.

Graziano, it seems, has inherited that character and love of working with the public. As his parents made a conjoined effort in business, so have Graziano and his wife Mary-ellen who said, "We want to keep the blues alive on Long Island, that's our main goal. And as you'll see by tonight, we don't skimp on the music. Our local musicians will disappear if we don't support them."

The Long Island Blues Society was founded 10 years ago by president Charlie McKenna, who stood behind the raffle table, lending a hand to the Graziano family. His organization of 300 members provides the volunteers for the Blues Festival. "We want to thank the Long Island Blues Society, for without them it's just Riverhead on its own. When we need help we turn to them. They give 80 percent of the manpower needed for the festival," Mary-ellen concluded.

There were also raffles. You could spot Graziano's youngest son, Gregory, selling tickets. Restaurant gift certificates were coupled together with theme parks, salon's, museums, and gift baskets. The large raffle prizes, got you a wine tour package for 10 from Martha Clara Vineyards and there was a three-month membership to Sportstime raffled off. Lastly, two of the local golf clubs supplied an outing for four with carts at Fox Hill and Calverton.

I think there's a good chance this jam-packed Graziano fundraiser helped to rescue the upcoming Riverhead Blues Festival and we'll have a place once again to celebrate our much beloved blues.

A Street Painting Scene

Local Artists Paint Some Pavement To Promote The Street Painting Festival Next Week

By R.B. Stuart

The sun smiled on the East End Arts Council last Saturday afternoon. It broke through long enough to save the street painting from being a wash out. The EEAC kicked off a preview in three downtown Riverhead locations for their 10th annual Community Mosaic Street Painting Festival slated for Sunday May 28th.

A trio of Long Island artists volunteered to chalk up the sidewalks with a masterpiece to bring attention to the upcoming free event. Manorville artist Sheri Egert was perched at the Riverhead Free Library painting a

A trio of locally renowned storytellers will entertain the kids. Harvey Heilbrun, a teacher in Shoreham-Wading River, Pamela MacFarlane, the Director of the Long Island Storytelling Guild, and John "Two Crows" Ginart will draw excited listeners.

The EEAC anniversary theme is "Celebrating The Mosaic Of Our Community." There will be arts and crafts on sale as well as homemade goods such as soaps, potpourri, candles, jams and a life size checkers tournament. The tournament will run from 12:00 - 3:00 p.m. and prizes will be awarded to first, second and third place. The prizes are gift certificates from

"TGI" Fridays for dinner, smoothies, appetizers or desert. Splish Splash has donated complimentary entrance passes to the water park.

This landmark event presented by the East End Arts Council will be on Sunday, May 28 from noon to 5 p.m. (rain date is Monday, May 29 from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m.) on East Main Street between Roanoke Avenue and East Street and the grounds of the East End Arts Council in Riverhead. Admission is free and all the proceeds from the Riverhead Community Mosaic support the EEAC Community School of the Arts. For more information please contact 631-727-0900.

woman's face and a sunflower on the sidewalk. Her reason for choosing this picture was, "I liked the fact that there's no limitations. I'm ecstatic because it's such a large space and it permits you to be more creative, as opposed to being more limited on a canvas or a piece of paper."

The husband and wife artist duo from Riverhead, Lianne Alcon and Bryan Landsberg had postponed a wedding to sit on the sidewalk in front of the East Enders Coffee House to chalk a tribute to Mother's day, a modern day version of Mother Mary holding her son Jesus. "We wanted to choose whose style we'd use. Mine is impressionistic and my husbands are surrealistic. We chose something colorful and that had meaning," Landsberg added.

The internationally known Michelangelo of street painting, Rod Tryon from Cutchogue was in front of Atlantis Marine World putting the finishing touches on his pirates. "I wanted to do something the kids would enjoy. Mostly because it was colorful, simple and within the four hour time frame I had," explained Tryon who is jetting off to Italy next week.

If you'd like to sponsor a Street Painting Square, they may be purchased the day of the event for $20. The sponsorship supports scholarships at the Community School of the Arts. Levels of sponsorship range from $75 - $300 and your business name or dedication will be inscribed above your street square.

Following a traditional opening ceremony on Sunday, May 28th, Greenport Composer George Cork Maul will open with his unique brand of free improvisation. Lauren and Jim Von Ende will follow by performing a blend of jazz and acoustic guitar. Also tickling your musical ears will be the young men and women of the CBC African Drummers of Medford, the 20-piece Gordon Hurley Big Band, DC Hatcher and Holy Family, Spicy Tuna and Who Are Those Guys. Later in the afternoon on acoustic guitar, singer songwriter Deborah Lombardi and Blues Festival veteran's vonTronics will provide the sound support thanks in part to a generous donation by the Friends of the Riverhead Free Library.

Drink What You Like.....Don't Listen to Critics

You really shouldn't listen to wine critics. That may seem an odd statement coming from one who counts himself as a wine critic, but let me expound upon it and explain. You shouldn't listen to wine critics without understanding or learning about what they like.

Too often people walk into a wine shop and buy a wine based solely upon a numerical score given by one wine critic or another. You've probably done it yourself — we all have at one point or another in our wine-loving lives.

If Robert Parker, the world's most powerful wine critic, gives a wine a score of 96, you absolutely should not assume that you'll like it. Parker, just like anyone else, likes certain wine styles and dislikes others. He tends to like big, powerful, fruit-forward wines that are high in tannin and alcohol. If you like those types of wines, fine, by all means follow his lead and buy the wines he likes. But keep in mind — if you don't, that doesn't mean you are "wrong" for not liking them. Parker liking a wine is of no consequence if you don't like it.

The key is to explore. Try wines rated highly by a variety of writers and get to learn their palate and favorite wine styles. It's entirely possible, likely in fact, that I've written complimentary things about a wine that hasn't captured your attention the way it did mine. Everyone is different and that's part of what makes wine so great. No one can tell you what you like. Only you know.

So how do I go about tasting wines? Most of the wines reviewed in this column are tasted "blind" against at least one other wine made from the same varietal or a similar blend. Blind tasting involves putting a paper bag (or something else) over a bottle so that the label is hidden, and removing the cork so that I don't know the producer of the wine I'm tasting. By doing this, I'm unaffected by labels or producer names. There are instances, of course, when blind tasting isn't possible, but objectivity always is.

While I do note the color and overall appearance of a wine, it isn't nearly as important to me as how the wine smells and tastes. By swirling the wine a few times around the glass and sniffing, you can begin to evaluate a wine's style, condition and complexity.

Next I sip, hold the wine in my mouth and "slurp" which draws air in and helps release various flavors. While in the mouth, we can assess how the wine's flavors, alcohol level, acidity and tannin work together. Is the wine balanced? Is it fruity? Are the tannins harsh?

It is also important to spend time with a wine. While Parker plows through wines (some say he only spends 30-60 seconds per wine), I prefer to spend an entire evening with a wine, tasting it out of the bottle, then with food, and then later in the evening as it's had time to breathe in the glass or in a decanter. Particularly with red wines, this exploration over time often reveals changes and nuances that fast, power tasting doesn't allow for. This is an advantage I enjoy because I'm not reviewing thousands of wines a year like Mr. Parker.

But regardless of how wine is tasted/reviewed/written about, there is nothing more important than your own palate and your own enjoyment. Wine is meant to be enjoyed, not worried about. For years, my personal wine motto has been "Drink what you like. Don't listen to critics."

So why should you bother reading columns like this one? Because I hope my writing inspires you to seek out new local wine experiences. Because I hope to introduce you to the joy of wine and the people who make it happen. But mainly, because you love and want to learn more about it. That's why I write about it, after all.

The Proms Of The North Fork

Our Writer Gets The Scoop On All The Different Proms Happening This Spring

By Phyllis Lombardi

Come on children, let's dance. This is no make-believe ballroom. It's you high school prom. Go have a good time. So say I, even in the wake of several prom cancellations in Nassau County. Perhaps those young people in our sister county confused a good time with a gross time. Gross excesses of money and partying, for example.

But I remain confident that North Fork high school students know how to fill an evening with good things. They're 17 or 18, they do so many things with skill and class. Why not a prom?

Just to dispel some doubts a handful of you may entertain, I did a little prom poking around. Now mind you, my high school prom was in the early 1950s, my escort didn't wear a tuxedo, but he wore his Marine uniform.

For the rest? All the arrangements? All the anticipation? Not much has changed.

Mary Fitzpatrick, principal of Southold High School, estimates she's been to 30 proms over the years. She's looking forward to this year's, (Ms. Fitzpatrick is one of several chaperones) which, will be held on June 2 at Rock Hill Country Club in Manorville. Southold's prom has a bit of a twist to it. It's run by the junior class, and seniors are the invited guests. Southold High School is a small school with approximately 72 students in the senior class and 95 who are juniors. Everyone, of course, recognizes everyone else even if gowns and tuxedos have replaced jeans and T-shirts.

Good naturedly, Ms. Fitzpatrick admitted that in the early days of her prom going, she dragged along her husband. Now he sits out the proms at home and Ms. F. gets to have all the fun for herself. If her tone of voice counts for anything, this high school principal enjoys every minute (well almost) of prom night.

It seems Greenport High School stepped out early this year. Their prom was held April 22 at Patchogue's West Lake Inn and was a great success. Don't take my word only. Let's talk with Danielle Volinski who lives in East Marion and is a senior at Greenport.

First off, you should know that Danielle is a very capable and busy young woman whose senior year thoughts were not centered on gowns and guys. She is an honor student, plays the flute in the high school band, was a cheerleader for four years, and even sang solo in this year's Greenport Idol. Add working at Skipper's restaurant in Greenport to that list of activities.

But when prom time waltzed around, Danielle admitted to some excitement. Quite a bit, really. Prom night consisted of dinner and lots of dancing, including a conga-line opportunity for everyone to admire each other. Danielle's dress, a pale pink, with a bit of silver-thread glitter, was described to me fondly, almost lovingly.

You can be sure that Danielle's North Fork grandmas will show you one or two photographs. Just ask Marge Volinski or Toni Berkoski.

Oh, and yes, let's not forget, the name of Danielle's escort that evening, A.J. Cavagnaro, a student at Southold High School. Poor guy. Nobody seems concerned whether his tux had the least bit of glitter to it.

May 19 is the big day/night for Mattituck High School. Barbara Smith a teacher of reading and senior class advisor, said that both the junior and senior classes have been working for the prom's success for a long time. That included considerable fund-raising through car washes, and selling flowering bulbs. Now that the tough stuff is over, more than 200 students will enjoy an elegant "Night in Vegas" theme at Calverton Links in Calverton.

Ms. Smith has danced away the night at a number of Mattituck proms. She'll be joined by Shawn Petretti, Mattituck's principal. And she suspects Jim McKenna, Mattituck-Cutchogue superintendent and former high school principal, will be in attendance too. Sounds like a good night.

June 21st is prom time for Riverhead High School students. This year the event is at Giorgio's in Calverton, said Deborah Kukla-MacLellan, who, along with Patrick Burke, is a co-advisor of the senior class.

In this case, faculty members and staff do the cooking for the kids. I can hear it now.

"Hey, teach, you burn one more hot dog and it's detention for a week."

Back to the prom. More than 300 students will attend. Are you ready for this? The students requested some swing era songs with "I'll Be Seeing You" the number one choice.

Deborah has been in the Riverhead school district for 23 years and she and her husband have attended 15 Riverhead proms. She offers that, just like any student going to the prom, what to wear is a concern. This year it will probably be a sage green gown for Deborah. It will look good as she stands next to her daughter, a senior, at the prom.

When Deborah sums up the work she and Patrick Burke put into pulling off the prom, she says, "We feel like mom and dad of the bride and groom, all 300 of them."

Hey, teach, thanks a lot, and we'll be seeing you.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

WHITNEY BIENNIAL AND HAMPTON CONNECTIONS

This year's Whitney Biennial is not so different from past exhibits when one considers the criticism and self-consciousness that it continues to provoke. This critic is no exception regarding some concerns, particularly recognizing that many works do not adhere to the theme, "Day for Night," a cinematic term and process that creates a reality when there might not be one.

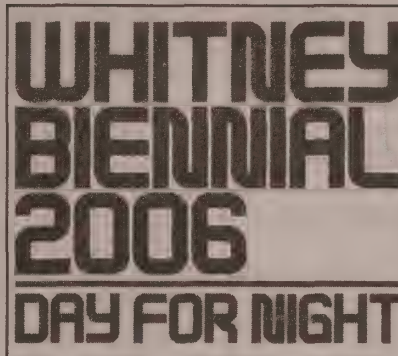

What does make sense about using this theme is its relationship to film/video. Not only did the expression come from the title of a Truffaut movie, but the Biennial's moving image selections certainly are more relevant regarding their realistic/fantasy nature than are the paintings and sculptures. Why can this be true? In a nutshell, film/video is considered by many experts as the only media to capture reality as it exists. Yet we also know that there is extreme manipulation on all levels of the moviemaking process, thus creating fantasy.

Notable among this later phenomenon is "Dtaot"

(Don't Trust Anyone Over Thirty, All Over Again) by Tony Oursler, a local resident whose video combines old documentary footage, new imagery, drawings, notations, and a live rock opera enacted by puppets. It's history and theatre as well as fact and fantasy especially when conveying multiple imagery (split screens) which makes the real seem unreal.

There are other, more literal uses of cinema, namely an installation by moviemaker Tony Conrad, where he pickles film stock, dropping it into various jars. While it seems like a satirical variation on Damien Hirst's infamous bottles filled with cow parts, Mr. Conrad has another idea in mind: his desire to preserve film in both its actuality and unreality.

Of course, we can't deny that some non-film/video examples also signify the theme, "Day for Night." A quaint favorite is a manufactured ancient standing stone covered with contemporary markings and even chewing gum. Such a monolith recalls real Celtic structures in Cornwall, England, a few similarly vandalized.

Another work is by Jordan Wolfson, his Hampton connection owing to a recent cover on Dan's Papers. Called "Frank Painting Company," it's a piece that could be missed, so minimal is its intentions. Talk about combining reality and unreality, the work is actually a small section of the exhibition wall, scraped and repainted. Its real value, however, is provoking the perennial question, "What is art?"

Come to think of it, the Whitney Biennial always does that.

The Whitney Biennial will be on view until May 29.

HONORING THE ARTIST: GREGORY TSONTAKIS-MALLY

A recent phone conversation with this week's cover artist, Gregory Tsontakis-Mally, revealed a man who enjoys a lifelong quest for life lessons, lessons he can apply to two pursuits he truly loves: teaching art and creating art. Thus, Mr. Tsontakis-Mally presents a fascinating picture of someone who sees diverse professions as being interconnected. For example, his ability to write music has informed his aesthetic endeavors. His experience teaching art years ago to senior citizens has given him "life stories" that certainly must impact on his current graduate students.

And, of course, Mr. Tsontakis-Mally's own life experiences have played a large part in his dual role as educator and artist. Coming from a family of teachers did not stop him from initially seeking a career in art. Such a pursuit was varied and influential. Attending St. John's University, Mr. Tsontakis-Mally learned about Cubism and color from a favorite professor. Transferring to SUNY - New Paltz, he had the additional opportunity to study abstraction.

But the fledgling artist's career was to be held up by the Vietnam War. "My induction was a result of the lottery," Mr. Tsontakis-Mally explains. "It was the only lottery I ever won," he says with a laugh.

"I was very torn about serving," he continues. "I was involved in the peace movement in college, but I had an old-fashioned side which felt it was my duty to go to Vietnam. I joined the Navy and was sent to the Gulf of Tonkin. I continued my art, doing abstract sketches on the ship. The situation wasn't good. Space was very tight. I was angry and confused. And when we would be in port, I would go to art museums instead of strip joints where everyone else went. But I fell in love with Thailand. If it hadn't been for the Vietnam War, I would have lived there forever."

But there was a war raging, and Mr. Tsontakis-Mally came back to the United States only to be greeted by more anger and confusion: "I'll never forget when we got home and were walking down the gang-plank. Someone spit at us." He pauses for a moment as if it had happened yesterday.

Mr. Tsontakis-Mally was still determined to be an artist, however, so he joined the Women's Studio Workshop as the first artist-in-residence. The experience turned out to be an important one when he did a series of lithographs. "I started to draw curving lines rather than my usual straight ones," he explains. "Later, I would use curve lines for my figurative works, too."

The years after the Vietnam War were important for another reason. It was a time Mr. Tsontakis-Mally describes as "a wilderness period, where my work was not good quality. But after that, I became myself."

Part of that "becoming" involved a change of direction as Mr. Tsontakis-Mally became certified as an art teacher in Glen Cove's public school system. He also taught part-time at St. John's University and Nassau Community College. Yet he never gave up his pursuit of art, experimenting with diverse media like large format photography with a recent trip to Mt. Athos in Greece.

Nowadays one can find Mr. Tsontakis-Mally teaching graduate students at SUNY - Stony Brook's Center of Excellence and Innovation in Education. We can't help but ask what advice he thinks his art teachers should give to their pupils.

"Art is communication," he answers without hesitation. "It conveys who you really are. When you're trying to figure out what to say in your art, pick the message that's closest to you."

Dave Evans' MINI - MOVIE REVIEWS

Over the Hedge

It's CGI-animal-adventure-with-celebrity-voiceovers time again, but this is a cut above the rest. The cast is predictably sparkling – from the ever-fantastic Alison Janney to Bruce Willis and, if that's your bag, faux-punk tweeny-bopper Avril Lavigne. But the real difference here is a smart plot, which sees a bunch of animals that realize the encroaching suburbs may allow them to become more bourgeois.

See No Evil

A bunch of delinquents are sent to clean up an old hotel when... oh, who cares? Of course, there's a murderer hidden away upstairs and, of course, the kids (pretty, vacant, psycho-fodder) are picked off one-by-one while trying to outsmart him. Oh, and they're joined by a policeman who has a troubled history with the killer. You already know if you want to see this film.

The Da Vinci Code

What to say? The film of the absurdly successful book is directed by the ever-adequate (and rarely anything more) Ron Howard and stars America's favorite actor Tom Hanks as Robert Langdon, the Harvard professor of religious symbology who gets caught up in a religious conspiracy. If I told you not to go because the plot is dull and dumb and none of these people need more money, would it make any difference?

Poseidon

In this remake of the 1972 classic The Poseidon Adventure, director Wolfgang Petersen finds himself comfortably at sea once again, following his earlier hits The Perfect Storm and Das Boot. It's visually impressive stuff and nobody could deny Petersen's affinity and understanding of the sea, but the plot itself feels weak and unnecessary, manned by the dregs of the C-list.

Goal! Living The Dream

On the brink of yet another World Cup, comes this sequel to the 2005 surprise hit. This isn't so much filmmaking as it is the sporting equivalent of a music video, but nonetheless, with cameos from David Beckham, Ronaldo and Zinedine Zidane, this will please any soccer fan.

Just My Luck

Before her attempt to make it as a serious actress in Robert Altman's upcoming A Prairie Home Companion sees the light of day, cherish the chance (if cherish is the right word) to see Lindsay Lohan in the bubblegum world from whence she came. Here she's an heiress who suddenly finds herself swapping her good luck with the bad luck of a tramp. Utterly sickening.

Hoot

It's a film about a kid trying to save some endangered owls and so by rights should be sickening, but it's hard to really fault this simple, endearing film. Logan Lerman does admirable work in the central role with strong support from Luke Wilson, Tim Blake Nelson and the evergreen Jimmy Buffett. Very nice indeed and pleasantly timed at ninety minutes.

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE III

Let's see now, "Tom Terrific" Cruise as the super-duper, spy guy Ethan Hunt, was left last dangling precariously in Mission: Impossible II – when? Hm-m-m, it seems that was back in 2000 and his closing impossible mission was to settle down somewhere enjoying some kind of bliss with Thandie Newton. The follow-up, M:I III, was scheduled for May 2004, but unraveled like those sinewy lines the agile action hero uses so dexterously to perform his deeds and Cruise, like Hunt, hung on tenaciously as star and producer of the franchise that goes back 40 years to television. It appears that in the past two years as producer, "Tom Terrific" has decided to meld Tom Cruise the star and the character he portrays, Ethan Hunt, into a fusion of self-revealing, bigger than life men who've peeled off the action hero mask of mystery and exposed their vulnerable "only human" selves – warts and all – the silly things super young men are capable of.

I regret to have to go along with the tide of rueful reproach of Mr. Cruise's outpourings – a flood of personal (or contrived) feelings and thoughts uncovering the real person. Sadly, in the multi-million dollar world of make believe, audiences pay their money to those who made the unbelievable believable. If their belief is shaken, so is the box office. Cruise's opening weekend receipts for M:I III were disappointing and folks are blaming his television antics and the like for the disappointment. I've not seen these television things. I blame what he's done on his Ethan Hunt persona, now endowed or perhaps dis-endowed with sensitive vulnerability. As the director and co-writer J.J. Abrams (TV's "Alias") put it, "He's just like the rest of us." If that's the case, why are we paying him a million to be little ol' us?

Do not be thoroughly dismayed. His M:I III wilting, weepy, romance with Michelle Monaghan, as Julia, waters down but does not extinguish ubiquitous feats of incredible firepower by the high-tech man from a stealth government agency who will spin around the world to demolish the enemy's wickedness. Julia opens the film in a prologue as tense as Ethan's jaw muscles. The movie's big bad-die is Davian, a decadently depressed munitions dealer, squeezed impressively by Philip Seymour Hoffman. He has a gun pointed at Julia, worrying Ethan a whole lot. Ethan has some idea that yelling and screaming at Davian might dissuade him before Davian puts a hole in her. Before anything is resolved, the director cuts back in time to the love bugs' engagement party. Ethan explodes with happiness. (Oh, joy! Art reflects real life.) This is the typical TV teaser and displays the faults of a fine TV director-writer. His small screen adroitness doesn't necessarily adapt to big screen size. Big time actors are cut down in size and dimension. The agency people Laurence Fishburne, Billy Crudup and Ving Rhames (the sole surviving original cast member) are diminished. In this case less is not more. Mr. Hoffman's very controlled, tired portrait smells of real hatred under his icy countenance. Alas, he's given very little time to display it.

Cruise's Ethan has also slipped into a gone-on-vacation mode with domesticity until Davian, with his bone-grinding evil, wakens the sleeping movie giant. Shrunk down to TV size, Ethan swings from one tall building to another like Tarzan. It might as well be Tarzan, you can't tell. It's night and shot almost entirely at a distant long shot. You have Ethan in a black shirt, on a nearly destroyed freeway bridge, running and a-shootin' at a fighter jet firing missiles at him. Who shoots down whom? I ask you! Hah! Going back to that opening scene with Ethan cuffed to a chair. Julia, tied and gagged, with Davian's gun pointed at her head and ready to use it as a bullet depository unless Ethan gives him a certain secret weapon. Who the heck knows what it is? The threat does give Ethan a secret weapon – and that's unnerving love to go with a fair share of clever thriller situations complete with latex disguises, like in the old days. The tristesse of Ethan's love goes back to those old days as well.

It is gossipy good fun to explain M:I III's box office limp to Cruise's bouncing on Oprah's couch and other odd missteps. Isn't it possible the Mission: Impossible premise is worn down to a slippery, surfacey mirror image of its former self? The producers are lucky. Their slip might have busted their behinds.

review: the lieutenant of inishmore...by gordin & christiano

The blood flows freely in the hilariously funny The Lieutenant of Inishmore, a dark comedy by the talented Martin McDonagh. Those familiar with the playwright's work are accustomed to his bizarre style, but nothing has quite prepared us for the acts of sadistic torture carried out by the lead character in his latest work.

The play, a Quentin Tarantino-esque terrorist satire that focuses not on the Middle East, but on the violence within splinter groups of the Irish Liberation Army, won the 2003 Olivier Award (the British equivalent of the Tony) for best comedy. After debuting at the Royal Shakespeare Company, The Other Place, Stratford-upon-Avon on April 11, 2001, months before the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center, it was moved to the Barbican Pit in London and subsequently to West End where it played until November 2002. The play first premiered on our shores in an acclaimed, limited-run production by The Atlantic Theatre Company this past February and was honored with multiple Lucille Lortel and Drama Desk Award Nominations. The transfer to Broadway was just in time to qualify for the Tony Award Nominations that were announced this past Tuesday.

Directed with razor sharp theatricality by Wilson Milam that is Grand Guignol in style, the story is set on the desolate island of Inishmore, where a shocking series of events is set in motion when someone kills Wee Thomas, the cat of IRA splinter group agent Padraic (David Wilmot). After receiving a call on his cell phone from his father, Donny (Peter Gerety), he interrupts a violent torture in Northern Ireland, where he is tearing the toenails off a bound marijuana dealer (Jeff Binder) who is hanging upside down. Believing his cat is merely sick and unaware the cat is already dead with his brains squeezed out, he rushes home to care for his beloved Wee Thomas.

Fearing Padraic's rage, Donny, who was caring for the cat, and a dim-witted young man, Davey (Domhnall Gleeson), who possibly may have run over Wee Thomas with his bicycle, are using black shoe polish to darken an orange cat in an attempt to disguise the tragedy from Padraic.

Also in this wry comedy are three IRA hit men from a rival splinter group (Andrew Connolly, Dashiell Eaves, and Brian D'Arcy James) who are intent on taking Padraic down because they believe he is "too mad for the IRA," and Davey's younger sister, Mairead (Alison Pill), a devotee to Padraic's splinter group of one. A crackerjack with a rifle, Mairead shoots cows in the eyes "to damage the meat trade," and has a crush on Padraic. The mayhem that breaks loose when these insensitive characters are thrown together is giddy sensationalism of the highest order, replete with buckets of blood and a rising body count that accumulates as fast as the ideas in McDonagh's grisly tale.

Intensely acted with passionate abandon by the entire cast, The Lieutenant of Inishmore, where cats are valued more than human life and their mutilated bodies are mourned while human corpses are treated like meat, is an outrageous entertainment that's not to be missed, especially by cat lovers. Everything is treated with such gleeful irreverence that even squeamishly morbid events turn shockingly funny.

The Lieutenant of Inishmore opened on Broadway at the Lyceum Theatre, 149 West 45th Street, May 3. Tickets are available by phone at 212-239-6200 and online@telecharge.com or at the theatre box office.

Entertainment In The Hamptons

review: oliver at gateway playhouse

Lionel Bart's musical adaptation of Dickens's classic Oliver Twist was an instant success in the West End and on Broadway, when it debuted just over forty years ago. The current revival that opened the Gateway Playhouse's 57th season is still lively and filled with songs such as "As long as he needs me" and "I'd do anything" that most people will know and are likely to come away from the theater singing or whistling.

This is a show of pure enjoyment because Dickens's vitriolic attack in his novel on the evils of mid-19th century society in England, with its misery and poverty for so many of the poor and disadvantaged, was largely expurgated by Bart. The director also chose to soften the character of Fagin, the leader of the band of trained child pickpockets whom he employs on the streets of London to steal handkerchiefs, watches and wallets from passersby in the street.

Raul Aranas, who stars as Fagin, has played the Engineer in several productions of Miss Saigon, including spells on Broadway and in London's West End; the Engineer, as a character, is the modern day version of Fagin. They both have that almost obsequious veneer of nicety and friendliness but deep down are really only concerned with getting rich by any means, usually unlawful ones. Given this, it was surprising that he chose, in this production, to play Fagin as a friendly, non-Jewish, almost avuncular figure, far too clean and well-dressed, and his vaguely upper class English accent really was totally out of place. The setting, after all, is Victorian London's East End and unless voice coaches are going to be employed to ensure reasonably accurate accents, I believe it would be better suited for directors to let actors use their own American-English accents; after all, we are talking about "two countries separated by a common language"! You could even transplant this musical to New York's infamous Five Points district because the surroundings of that time and the message would still ring true.

The title role was played with great charm and stage presence by Dante Baldassin, a fifth grade student and a product of Gateway's own acting courses. He looks the true wide-eyed innocent and almost certainly melted the maternal hearts of the ladies in the audience as he wistfully inquired "Where is love" at a time when his already lousy life is gradually getting lousier.

Another one of Dickens' great characters is the Artful Dodger, Fagin's able first lieutenant, still only a kid but street-smart beyond his years and very attached to Nancy, the downtrodden girlfriend of the vicious Bill Sykes. Eric Shelley made a great Dodger and Daina Michelle Griffith, as Nancy, was truly a lively Cockney girl, the epitome of the battered girlfriend who piteously keeps going back for more, just "As long as he needs me" as she piteously sings after being subjected to yet another bout of mindless violence. Dan Cooney looked the part of the evil Sykes, who would just as soon hit any man who looks at him the wrong way but again, maybe because of trying to acquire a difficult accent, his speech pattern was far less intimidating and threatening.

In the opening setting the poor unfortunates of the orphanage are seen laboriously working and then eating their pitiful food - all of which leads Oliver to the classic but ill-fated step of asking, "Please, sir can I have some more?" to the portly and obviously well fed Beadle, a role very amply filled by Michael Farina who goes on to court the widow Corney, played by Susan Jacks.

You can't stage Oliver without lots of kids. They sang well, they moved around the stage like pros and I am sure there were a lot of proud parents there to join in the well-deserved applause for their efforts.

This is a production that also requires a large adult cast and they were all very well balanced and a reflection of strong casting choices. Michael Hayward-Jones was a cultured caring benefactor of Oliver in the role of Mr. Brownlow; Michelle Ventimilla as Bet, Nancy's friend, shared her liveliness and also had the best Cockney accent, and Mischa Kischkum and Melinda Tanner made the most of their cameo roles of Mr. Sowerberry, the undertaker, and his wife.

Go and see Oliver. It really is a show for the whole family and you can't say that very often today.

THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

Preview: The World According to Garp

Gee, whiz, time really flies when you're having fun. Another season of Dan's Papers' "They Made the Movie Here" free Film Festival will come to an end on May 20th when we present The World According to Garp at the Ross School auditorium on Goodfriend Drive, off Rte 114 in East Hampton. The film primarily is set in the swinging sixties and severely outrageous seventies. I'm not particularly referring to the folks' ages but rather the colorful decades. So if you care to arrive in plaid bellbottoms and/or sheer batiks over nothing, it's OK.

The World According To Garp is the world according to John Irving's vaulting novel and director, George Roy Hill's movie adaptation in the way he had with Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid. We, locally, will also be entertained by recognizing our Long Island locations, especially the beaches that we think do more than substitute for Irving's New Hampshire.

Garp's world is wide, wild and as woolly as Robin Williams' harebrained, hair shirt, adventurous life as Garp (one name only), "the bastard son" (as he was known) of a totally liberated and "different" (for the time) woman, beautifully performed by Glen Close in her first feature. The film's chronology follows Garp's birth during World War II, through his boyhood, into adult life, marriage and writing career, cataclysmically wrought by his single-minded, thoroughly unorthodox Mom. And what a time-of-his-life it is!

The writing of the novel and the film's making is the time of popular liberation as well, the 1970s. Instigated by a rebellious youth culture, suddenly everyone was "into" sex and other new-found freedoms. So, expect this 1982 movie to be replete with S-E-X and much unfettered talk about it in language my father would have turned purple to hear on a sound track. Garp tumbles through it and experiences of social satire, absurd observations, baby-to-gallows humor, arch melodrama and fallen arches-heavy-footedness, but always with a smile. Including Sexual Politics.

Be prepared for some blunt fun, John Lithgow as a transsexual. Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn as shocked grandparents, Swoozie Kurtz as a shocked hooker and many more, all slugging wonderfully. These days you won't be as shocked. But if you bring your visiting Aunt Sadie from Walla Walla, you might bring along smelling salts, just in case.

You can count on some very refreshing refreshments to perk you up until dinnertime. The conversational talk will be good too. All this thanks to your host for the season, Sarah Halsey. Sadly, I, your erstwhile host, Guy de Fraumeni, remain shackled elsewhere. Au revoir.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer, writer and director of award-winning films for ABC, NBC, PBS, and European feature films. He has judged the major film and TV award competitions. He is assisted in this column by Sarah Halsey

When In Manhattan... BY OLIVER PETERSON

Summer Cometh

I can't believe another season of this column has once again come and gone. I've been sitting here in my office, beneath a Thompson for Sheriff silkscreen and signed poems by Charles Bukowski and Jim Carroll, looking at the month of May on my Trout of America calendar, and a painting a friend of mine did of Baudelaire that has yet to be framed. Among these things, by the low light of a desk lamp, I can't help thinking that this is where I want to be. As small and inconsequential "When in Manhattan" is in the grand scheme of things, it keeps me writing and, I hope, you reading, every week. I did some counting and this installment is the 92nd in my three-year run. Don't worry, I'm not going to rip off Sally Flynn, The Sheltered Islander, and begin numbering my columns (She's at #399 this week, by the way), but it was fun to take inventory. So there it is – I've provided you with almost one hundred aspects of our neighboring metropolis. We're lucky to be so close, but some might also point out that where we actually live is one of the most desirable places in the world. As a result of this and the return of summer marked by the upcoming Memorial Day festivities, it's time to shift gears. This little piece of the paper becomes unnecessary as locals begin to work more hours and travel less, and the city folk trade in their gray flannels for bathing suits and tennis whites. The Hamptons is where, as they say, "it's at" in the summer. Frankly, I like the break. I like to have a couple of months to refresh. But before I say goodbye and disappear into the back of the paper with my hard-hitting exposés on tablecloths, celebrity neighbors, wainscoting and choosing the right napkin rings for your barbecue, I want to leave you with a few things to consider should you find yourself in the city before September.

First of all, this weekend, which is prior to Memorial Day and your last before our gulag of traffic and tourists, AIDS Walk New York is raising money with their annual 6.2-mile walk tributes much of their proceeds to Gay Men's Health Crisis. GMHC helps men and women of all sexual orientations with every aspect of the issues brought on by AIDS, from health to social. The walk is on Sunday, May 21st. The star-studded and fun event begins and ends in Central Park. Details can be found at AIDSWalk.net or by calling 212-807-WALK. Please get involved.

Since it's hard to know when your days off will be in the summer, I wanted to mention some things that go on throughout the warmer months. Shakespeare in the Park runs in Central Park all summer. Since 1962, the Public Theater has put on performances of the Immortal Bard at Delacorte Theater for free. This year, Macbeth and Bertolt Brecht's Mother Courage and Her Children starring Meryl Streep are scheduled. Click PublicTheater.org for more. SummerStage is another free series in Central Park, but features large outdoor concerts of various styles of music. The 2006 list of performers was announced on May 16th, the day after my deadline, so check out SummerStage.org for more info. Also check out the Metropolitan Opera in the Parks, the Big Apple Circus, Bryant Park Summer Film Festival, and of course, don't forget to look elsewhere for all the great art, music, dance, and theater that Manhattan provides.

Listing all this stuff makes me sad not to elaborate and bring them to life, but you have the tools. The Hamptons are fun in the summer, but don't forget that New York is close and, ironically, can be a nice break from the crowds. See you in September.

around Manhattan. Please consider walking, donating, sponsoring a walker, volunteering, or at least showing up to raise morale and add another supportive face to the crowd. I don't know anyone who hasn't been affected by AIDS. With things like bird flu and war ruling the headlines, people sometimes forget what a devastating and tragic disease this is. If you don't know someone with AIDS, you at least know someone who lost a friend or loved one to it. As citizens of the world, it is killing our family every day. Here in the Hamptons, we have a thriving gay community, and at the top of a list of benefiting organizations too long to reproduce, AIDS Walk New York con-

TAKE A HIKE WITH KEN KINDLER

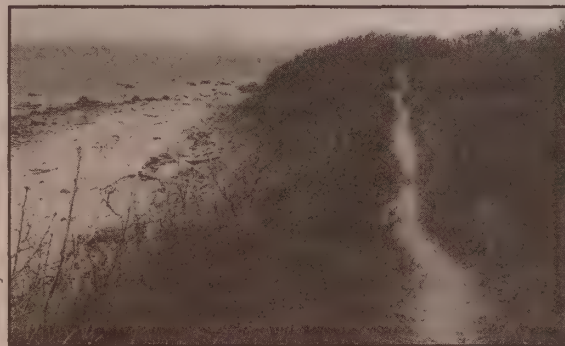

Shore, Bluff, Inner Woods

On Saturday, after a week of rain, I finally saw a break in the clouds and got out for a walk. One of my favorite places to visit is the eastern section of the Hither Woods Preserve. I parked in the large parking lot by Rod's Valley, near what was the old Navy Base at Fort Pond Bay in Montauk. Left behind by the base is a fantastic pier and a boat ramp that gives access to the bay. There are families and their dogs on the Edward V. Ecker Sr. Fishing Pier all year round. There are picnic tables and garbage cans for refuse near the parking area. The first thing you notice when you park here are the expansive fields of grass. These maintained fields are used by dogs and their human companions for recreation. Many mountain bicyclists love to park here to access the Hither Hills trail system, and I once saw a brave equestrian on the rocky trail by the pier. Police patrol the parking area and Town and Park personnel are often present. On the many occasions I have visited this parking lot after driving 70 miles from Sayville, the portable latrines near the entrance to the parking lot have always been serviceable and clean.

Continue up a hill and over the railroad tracks to a "T" intersection facing into the water. Turn left onto Navy Road. Continue past the "Edward V. Ecker Sr. Park" sign and small parking area. A powder blue-blazed trail can be accessed across the road from here. Stay on Navy Road until it ends at a larger parking lot that faces out onto the water. It is a distance of 2 miles from the intersection of Montauk Highway and Second House Road to the parking lot.

From here begin your hike by walking through the opening in the post and rail fence and heading across a grass field towards the fishing pier. Once you reach the pier continue along a sandy, rocky trail that runs along the shore. Pass the entrance to the powder blue-blazed trail on your left. This trail runs back to Navy Road. There is a kiosk, often with a supply of trail maps. Walk around the steel gate up a very wide trail with a loose sandy tread. Soon you reach a notch in the bluffs that gives you an incredible view of the rocky shoreline and pier from a height of approximately 60'. After a short distance this trail intersects with the Paumanok Path (PP). To the left the trail runs across the railroad tracks and then east, straight ahead the trail runs west, along the bluffs facing the bay. I followed the white rectangular blazes in a westerly direction. As you walk along the trail you will see several smaller unmarked trails opening north to the beach or out to a scenic view from the bluffs. Where the trail veers south away from the water, the vegetation changes from beach plum stunted scrub oak, and black cherry, to the larger inner woods trees. The larger, denser trees mute the wind blowing from the water and the woods are suddenly alive with the sound of bird song.

Here you reach a fork in the path; the trail to the left is a wide trail of Colonial origin, called the Old North Road. The PP runs along the bluffs, while the Old North Road also runs along the shore, but further south into the woods. After approximately 1 mile the two trails come back together. By walking either of these paths you will learn to recognize where they meet so you can walk the two segments as a loop. Once you learn the loop, you can then find the three trails that cut across the loop.

If you find the rugged Block Island Sound shoreline as irresistibly beautiful as I do, then you will also wish to find the few places along the PP where there is access to the sound and bay. When you get to know this little network of trails you can access the shore, the bluffs, and the inner woods several different ways. Weekday mornings are optimal for bird watching expeditions here.

Luxurious Comfort

When it comes to clothing, there is practical and there is fashionable. Some items stay relegated to their subdivision, like yellow rain slickers oozing with practicality and stiletto pumps flaunting their complete lack thereof. Then, of course, there are the articles of clothing that manage to straddle the two, like plaid rain boots or a fitted down coat. But beyond these two categories is a third, most desirable category, whose emphasis lies in luxurious comfort.

When I speak of luxury, I am not referring to swirling Prada skirts. When I rant about comfort, I am not suggesting that you pull on footsie pajamas. There are certain brands of clothing that just seem to go beyond the call of duty when it comes to both, and because of their ability to make the wearer look so comfortable in his/her own skin, these clothes comprise a new category of D) all of the above.

I first discovered the luxurious comfort of inspired clothing at Mandala Boutique in Amagansett. They have a full line of brands that fall in such a way that you feel like you're wrapping your body in whipped cream. And Mandala just opened up a brand new boutique in Amagansett Square that is bursting with luxuriously comfortable clothing.

So who are these designers who make slipping into a t-shirt feel as sweet as dunking into a warm bath? Of course they've got stories behind them, and I'll regale you with a few of my personal favorites.

I was working behind the desk at the yoga studio when I first fell in love with Woo. I was folding underwear in neat piles, and it was softer than any piece of clothing I had ever touched. It was like petting the underside of a bunny, folding these drawers! I looked at the tag. WOO.

Staci Woo is a native of Northern California who studied art at UC Santa Barbara. She worked for a local swimwear company before bursting into the fashion industry by joining A. Gold E. as an assistant designer. While there, she started working on her own styles, and found that her designs, such as unique sling bags, became hits with her friends. Her wares grew to such high demand that she started the line: Woo. Staci Woo uses vintage textiles and recycled clothing to create her designs, and the result is a highly specialized product that makes the wearer feel completely unique and luxuriously comfortable. Her newest challenge is the line of underwear that brought her into my consciousness: UnderWoo. With the goals of comfort, coolness, and quality, she went about designing this line.

Da Nang clothes are sturdy, functional, and very fashionable. Their cargo pants have a subtle femininity and their tunics cling delicately to the body.

Inspired by the artistry and color of the Vietnamese city of Da Nang, this line of clothing has a cultural history. Da Nang first emerged in January 2003, at a time when military styles were all the rage. But the designers of Da Nang believed that the unique combination of casual styles and Asian-inspired charm would last beyond the trend. They were right, as Da Nang continues to flourish as a business as the years pass. The miracle of Da Nang is that as soon as you pull an article of clothing on, it looks like it was made for your body. There's something about the fabric that makes it look worn without looking ragged, and the result is casual elegance.

Passing my hand along the table of t-shirts at Satori in Sag Harbor, my fingers find their resting place on a pile of softness. The delicately folded t-shirts have no tag. Instead, imprinted on the inside of the collar are three simple dots. You can tell the size of the clothing by the color of the dots. Three Dots was co-founded by Sharon Lebon in 1995. The basis was three styles, three sizes, twelve colors. Now, Three Dots has become a multi-million dollar company with a full line of menswear and maternity clothing to accompany the original women's line.

Many other luxurious designers find their home in the streets of East Hampton and in the shop windows of Southampton. From Velvet to Calypso and Theory to Eileen Fisher, we have access to some of the best designers in the world. But not everything that's expensive is necessarily luxurious, and sometimes you can find the softest stuff without breaking the bank. The point is this: when it's time to splurge, forget the torture-device stilettos and the body-maiming undergarments. Slip into something luxurious that feels luxurious. Today, the rain is falling hard, but I am comfy-cozy in my soft-as-butter Woo shirt.

EAST END KID:

CHILDREN'S MUSEUM OF MANHATTAN AFTERNOON OF STARS

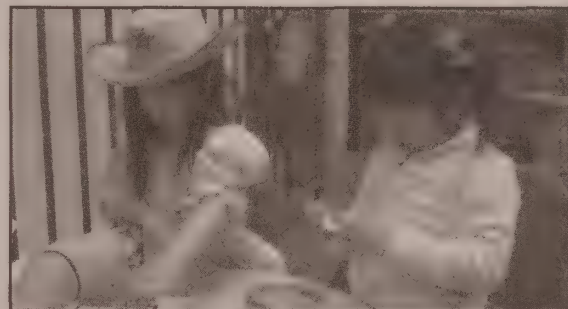

BY EMILY HART POST
With a little help from Katlean de Monchy and
David Post

AFTERNOON OF STARS
- The Children's Museum of
Manhattan had its Spring
Benefit on May 7, to benefit
Disadvantaged Families and Children. It was a three hour romp of games, crafts, experiences and entertainment. I chose crafts projects which included claymation working on Ice Age - The Meltdown characters, and other art projects. Other kids danced with cast members of Disney's The Lion King, while others enjoyed the live performances of Cirque 2:21. It was a fun day that went by so fast because there was so much to do.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

It's feel-good time, a pleasure just to see the many colors of spring at the farmer's markets and farm stands that are opening at a brisk pace here on the East End. With longer, sunnier days in view, it is primetime to enjoy the bounty fresh from the growers. No doubt I have been inspired by the farming community but no matter where I have lived I've gravitated towards the beauty of truly fresh produce, overflowing bins of colorful lettuces, asparagus, spinach and kale to prepare healthful dishes. A nutritionist I know appropriately advised, "Eat something green every day."

Bucatini with asparagus and spinach, a terrific one dish meal, is a double header in the nutrition department, incorporating glorious asparagus and fresh, crinkly spinach. For a complementary side, sauté spinach with garlic and a touch of hot pepper or serve asparagus in broth enriched with sweet butter.

ASPARAGUS IN BROTH

Serves 4

20 thin or medium asparagus
1/2 -3/4 cup chicken or vegetable broth
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1-2 tablespoons unsalted butter, cut into small pieces
Chopped parsley for garnish

1. Break the asparagus where they naturally bend and discard tough end portions. Trim away the triangular scales along the spears, leaving the tender scales at the head. Rinse and set aside.

2. Put asparagus in a skillet, arranging the heavier spears close together in the center, graduating thinner ones to the sides of the pan. Pour over broth to barely cover and bring to a boil. Season lightly with salt and pepper.

3. Adjust heat and simmer briskly for 4-7 minutes, depending on thickness of asparagus. When asparagus is barely tender, stir in butter, bit by bit, until it melts. Transfer asparagus to a warm serving dish and immediately reduce liquids in skillet to a thin glaze. Pour reduction over the asparagus and garnish with parsley. Serve warm.

SAUTEED SPINACH WITH GARLIC AND HOT PEPPER

Spinach can be used interchangeably with Swiss chard.
Serves 4

2 pounds fresh loose spinach
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 large cloves garlic cut into slivers or crushed whole
Pinch hot pepper flakes, optional
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
2-3 teaspoons breadcrumbs

1. Remove heavy stems from spinach and discard any blemished leaves. Rinse spinach leaves thoroughly in several changes of lukewarm water to rid sand and grit. Drain, leaving some of the water that clings to its leaves. Coarsely chop leaves on a board.

2. Heat oil in a large non-stick skillet and add the garlic and optional pepper flakes. Sauté for 40-50 seconds or just until garlic is a light golden brown. Put in the spinach and season with salt and pepper to taste if not using the flakes. Toss the leaves to coat in the pan and cook for 3-4 minutes until slightly wilted. Sprinkle over breadcrumbs; give the leaves another toss to absorb the excess liquid in the pan and serve hot.

BUCATINI WITH ASPARAGUS AND SPINACH

Bucatini (or perciatelli as it is also called) is thick spaghetti with an almost imperceptible hole through its entire length and is suitable dry pasta for use with vegetables.

Serves 4-6

3/4 pound asparagus
1 1/2 pounds spinach, leaves only
1 bunch scallions, white and light green part
4 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped

Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

1/2 cup heavy cream
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
2-3 tablespoons snipped chives
For the pasta
1 pound bucatini or perciatelli
Kosher salt for cooking the pasta

1. Break asparagus spears at the base where they naturally bend, then with the tip of a paring knife remove the points along the spears leaving the tender tips. Cut the asparagus into 1-inch lengths and cook in salted boiling water for 6-7 minutes; drain.

2. Meanwhile, rinse spinach, then soak in several changes of lukewarm water until free of sandy deposits. Place spinach in a pot directly after its last rinse and cook, covered, in the water that clings to its leaves for 3 minutes after it comes to a boil. Drain and chop coarsely. Cut scallions into one-inch lengths on the diagonal. Vegetables can be prepared ahead to this point.

3. Bring a large pot of water to the boil, stir in 1-2 tablespoons salt and put in the pasta. Separate the strands with a pasta fork and cook at a rolling boil for about 8-10 minutes or according to the directions on the package until al dente, firm to the bite.

4. Meanwhile, heat olive oil in a large skillet, add the garlic and sauté briefly. Add the prepared vegetables, season to taste with salt and pepper and add the cream. Simmer the mixture for several minutes until the vegetables are heated through. By this time the pasta should be done. Drain the pasta and transfer to a warm serving bowl. Add half the vegetable sauce and toss to mix. Pour over the remaining sauce, toss to mix, sprinkle with grated cheese and chives and serve at once.

GREAT FOOD IN A COMFORTABLE SETTING

Dining in the Hamptons

Rubbed the Right Way

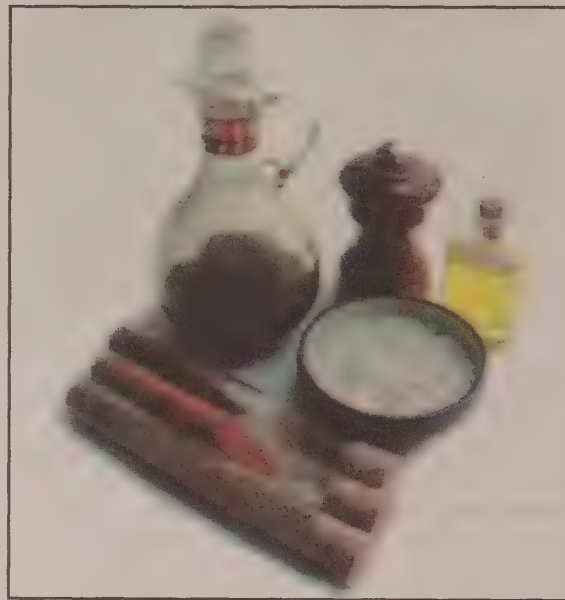

Virtually anything tastes great cooked on the outdoor grill, from meats to fish to vegetables. The simplest way to grill anything is to season the food with nothing but salt and pepper, and perhaps a bit of olive oil. Yet, variety is the spice of life, and grilled foods can be enhanced by spice rubs, marinades and glazes. Prepared versions can be bought at the grocery store, but home cooks will find making their own rubs and sauces easy and fun. Although there are no rules beyond using flavors that appeal to you, here are some suggestions. In all cases, salt and pepper should be added to taste.

Fish. Because fish tends to be more delicate in flavor, care should be taken not to overwhelm the palate with an overly strong rub, glaze or marinade. Brushing fish with olive oil, lemon and an herb such as mint or tarragon works quite well. If you prefer a glaze, combine sugar with some vinegar and lemon juice, and simmer until syrupy and reduced. For a rub, you might try just some chile powder, cumin and perhaps some anise.

In all cases, meatier fish, rather than flaky fish, turn out best on the grill. Think tuna, salmon and swordfish. Shrimp also works quite well on the grill and can take a more powerful marinade, such as one made with soy sauce, honey and stronger spices such as cilantro or rosemary.

Pork. Pork takes to tangy/sweet marinades quite well, although a medley of Indian spices can also be quite delicious. For a marinade, consider combining either honey or maple syrup with mustard and chile. Likewise, a marinade of sweet and acidic juices would be great – perhaps pineapple juice and lemon juice, with some ginger and garlic.

It is always a good idea to let pork chops or a pork loin sit in a brine solution for a few hours before grilling. The result will be a juicier, more tender and less "porky" flavor.

Chicken. Like pork, chicken takes well to savory rubs and tangy/sweet sauces. But chicken also does very well with a simple marinade of lemon juice and olive oil. The lemon will delicately infuse into the chicken, allowing the true flavor of the grilled chicken to shine with little distraction. For sauces, any combination of sweet and spicy will work, although chicken seems to work well with flavors that are deeper than those appropriate for pork. A brown sugar or molasses base, along with chili powder, paprika and a bit of cayenne pepper would be lovely.

When cooking chicken, it is useful to start it off over high heat to brown the skin, and then use lower heat to cook the meat through. If you are using a charcoal grill, pile most of the briquettes on one side of the grill. During the quick browning stage, place the chicken over the hot coals, taking care not to let the skin burn too much as the flames flare up. When cooking, place the chicken over the cooler side of the grill, and cover the grill with the open vents placed on the same side as the chicken. This will allow the chicken to cook in a hot space without flare-ups, while the smoke from the coals passes over the chicken for added flavor.

Steak. I happen to feel quite strongly that a high-quality cut of steak grilled outdoors and cooked to medium-rare perfection requires nothing more than salt and pepper. If any additional seasoning is to be used, a simple dry rub would probably be best, as it would provide a burst of flavor on the crust without taking away from the flavor of the juicy meat. Just bit of chili powder, cumin and onion powder might work well.

The exception is flank steak, which requires a marinade. I prefer a simple marinade of lime juice and garlic, but one could certainly create a more substantial marinade along the lines of those used with chicken or pork.

Vegetables. Vegetables can be easily overwhelmed, so simplicity is best. I prefer seasoning vegetables with nothing but salt, pepper and olive oil, although for some vegetables a dry spice rub could add a bit of zing, and a citrus-based glaze or marinade could change the minds of even the most anti-vegetable people.

Whatever spice rub, glaze or marinade you make, it will last at least long enough to be made in advance before company comes. Also, if you do not wish to create your own recipes, Bobby Flay's Boy Meets Grill is a terrific cookbook for the outdoor chef.

Dining in the Hamptons

Coals, Chips, and Planks

From all accounts, the first controlled use of fire was roughly 300,000 to 600,000 years ago by Homo erectus (an evolutionary predecessor to humans). So say what you like about the Raw Food Movement, but if fire has been used in cooking for almost half a million years there has to be something good about it. This article isn't about gas vs. coal. This article is about cooking au naturel – with wood – the way they did several millennia ago. Well, maybe not exactly like they did back then.

Stoking a wood fire in a grill is just like doing it in the fireplace. Start at the bottom with newspaper and kindling, then layer the wood on top, allowing for airflow. Do not use lighter fluid because its chemical smell will counteract the delightful scent of the wood. Light the paper and kindling and let the fire burn down to coals. When you can hold your hand above the fire for only two seconds, it is time to place the meat on the grill. Wood burns more quickly than charcoal so you may have to top it up every once in a while with small pieces of the same kind of wood. Just avoid flare-ups.

The second way to cook with wood is to use wood chips. The benefit of this technique is that you can use them with any type of fire, gas, charcoal, etc. Soak woodchips for at least a half hour (preferably an hour) before using to prevent them from burning too quickly. If you are using a gas grill, place the wood in a pan or on aluminum foil and place in an area of the grill with low heat (with the cover on) several minutes before cooking food, allowing the wood to release its scent and flavor. Add meat and cover the grill. On a charcoal flame, you can use the above method, or place the wood chips directly on the fire. This will open up the wood more quickly, and actually burn it, creating a smokier flavor.

The third option when cooking with wood is the plank. Placing food directly on a wood plank is a great way to get the flavor directly into the meat. Cedar is the most widely used wood for this, but almost any type works. (Note: make sure the wood hasn't been treated with anything. Using treated wood could be extremely dangerous and possibly deadly.) As with the wood chips, soak the plank in water to prevent a quick burn. Once ready, place the meat, fish, poultry, or vegetables on the wood and then put the plank onto the grill and close the lid. With this technique, the food cooks much slower, but this allotment of time allows for more flavor to be absorbed from the wood.

These are the three basic ways to grill with wood. Obviously, you can combine them to create a truly unique flavor because each species of wood is distinct. Here is a quick rundown of what wood works best with what type of food – but like anything else, it is really up to the diner.

When we think about cooking with wood, two species come to mind: hickory and cedar, but there are a wide variety of woods to choose from. Here is a list compiled by several sources to get you started:

Alder – Light, slightly sweet. Good with poultry, fish (especially salmon), pork.

Almond – Sweet. Good with all meats.

Apple and Crabapple – Light, hint of fruit, slightly sweet. Good with pork and poultry.

Birch – Low key, smoky, slightly sweet. Good with pork and poultry.

Cedar – Light, slightly sweet. Great for fish, poultry, and beef.

Cherry – Mild and fruity. Good with poultry, pork and beef.

Hickory – Strong, bacony, sweet. Great for pork, beef and ribs.

Maple – Low key and smoky. Great for pork.

Mesquite – Strong, sweet and earthy. Chicken, beef, and fish.

Oak – Strong smoky flavor good with red meat and ribs (If you can get your hands on used oak wine or whiskey barrels, they produce a fantastic scent; rich, great for beef, especially your finer cuts.)

Pecan – Sweet, mild, Good with anything.

Walnut – Heavy smoke flavor. Good with red meats and game. Mix with lighter woods.

Dining in the Hamptons

Golden Pear Grows More Branches and a Book

The Golden Pear Café Cookbook by Keith Davis, published by St. Martin's Press/Thomas Dunne Books, will be available from May 18 in Golden Pear Cafés and bookstores for $24.95. The book features 75 of the best-loved and most requested recipes from the famed Golden Pear Cafés, which have become a Hamptons tradition, a place where anyone can get a great cup of coffee, savor a freshly-made breakfast or lunch, and people watch.

Our customers have been asking for our secret recipes, from the café and catering menus, so the book is really for them. "These are recipes anyone can cook at home," says Keith Davis, author, founder, and proprietor of The Golden Pear Café.

The collection of café recipes, perfect for beginners and equally appealing to those experienced in the kitchen, include: Coffee and Breakfast Treats such as The Perfect Cup of Coffee, The Farmhouse Frittata and six types of Golden Pear's most popular Muffins Soups, Chili and Stews including the famous Texas Turkey Chili and Hamptons Clam Chowder Salads;

Sandwiches and Wraps including the Southwestern Grilled Chicken Wrap and Country Cole Slaw and Main Courses such as American Shepherd's Pie, Seared Sesame Tuna with Pacific Wasabi Sauce and Bow-tie Pasta with Grilled Portobello Mushrooms and Tomato-Basil Cream Sauce, Bakery Treats such as the Golden Pear Café's Amazing Chocolate & Walnut Brownies or Blueberry Crumb Cake are included.

Loyal local customers enjoy the cafés as do visiting celebrities. The book includes endorsements from actor Alec Baldwin and chef/restaurateur Tom Schaudel with a forward from publisher Dan Rattiner of Dan's Papers.

Confirmed dates for book signings by Mr. Davis, in cafés and local bookshops during May and June, are as follows:

East Hampton: East End Books, Saturday, 5/27 5:30-7 p.m.; Golden Pear Café, Saturday, 6/10 3-5 p.m.

The newest one will open in Sag Harbor on May 25. These natural meeting places are at the center of daily community life in the Hamptons, open from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily. Patrons are welcomed by friendly staff into a bright and airy décor filled with the smells of freshly ground coffee and hand-made muffins. On the take-out or eat-in menu are freshly-made baked goods, breakfasts, salads, wraps, sandwiches, soups, chili, afternoon treats, fine estate-grown coffees, cappuccinos, and other creative specialty coffee drinks.

Dining in the Hamptons

Named after the Roman Goddess of the harvest, Annona Restaurant's traditional Italian cuisine is inspired by the bounty of fresh, local produce. It is nestled atop a luxury car showroom housed in an impressive glass rotunda. So, after gawking at Ferraris and Bentleys, one takes an elevator to the restaurant and finds an elegant Italian eatery with floor to ceiling windows overlooking a garden.

Italian sensuality, fresh local produce, fine wine and hotter-than-hell cars. There's no way to deny that the concept is alluring.

Peter and I were seated at a romantic booth and served champagne upon arrival. A Nick Drake song was playing. Not a bad start.

The menu offers dishes inspired by many different regions of Italy, everything from freshly made pasta, perfect pancetta to pepperoncini. Seasonal specialties like heirloom tomatoes, ramps and morels, sweet corn, oysters on the half-shell, fresh local fish and small production aged-beef from the Four Story Hill Farm, in Pennsylvania, were among many carefully selected ingredients. The wine list is crafted from only smaller boutique producers and provides an impressive selection of over 200 wines. Each bottle was presented by Pietro Bottero, a knowledgeable wine enthusiast.

The menu is organized in the traditional form and divided into three courses. The Antipasto course offered myriad possibilities and we chose two recommended delicacies. First was a risk for me – baby eels. Intimidating in theory, perhaps, but in practice, delicious. Shipped fresh from Spain, this sought-after delicacy is only available for a few weeks each year. Motivated as much by curiosity as hunger, I chose this adventurous dish and was pleasantly surprised by the tender eels served hot in a herb-infused broth.

The other Antipasto was a bit safer: beef carpaccio from Four Story Hill Farm was freshly delivered that day and served over arugula drizzled with olive oil and topped with thinly-sliced Parmesan. The texture was remarkable, the dish a testament to how far simple preparation and immaculate ingredients can go.

The Primi course consists of half-portioned pastas prepared with seasonal accents, and a variety of meats and sauces. Peter's choice, a pumpkin-sage ravioli was light and refreshing enough while seducing the palate with rich flavors, nutty tones and its creamy base.

My favorite dish was the Agnolotti. These small, half-moon-shaped ravioli were stuffed with a fresh, very rich cow's milk cheese called mascarpone. The name is said to come from "más que bueno," Spanish for "better than good." It was complemented by scarlet sweet corn, smoky bacon pieces, asparagus and serrano chili – a harmony of tastes with layers and complexity.

Other pasta selections include the Tuscan-style pork ragu, or pappardelle with duck. A risotto with bone marrow was featured on the list of specials as well as spaghetti with veal meatballs.

For the Secondi, we were served New England sea scallops, seared to succulence and accompanied by roasted scarlet corn topped with thin bits of lardo, an Italian specialty of cured meat that is buttery in texture and infused with undertones of rosemary. It had that distinct smoky taste particular to wood-burning ovens. When paired with Chianti Classico Cacchiano (2001), a medium-bodied wine with cherry undertones that comes from central Tuscany, the already tasty dish became a medley of perfection.

To accompany the scallops was a luscious veal chop from the Four Story Hill Farm. Thick, tender and served on the bone. While enhanced by the flavor of the seasonal ramps and earthiness of the morels, the farm-raised veal dominated the flavor palate. The sauce was appropriately subtle as the ingredients needed little embellishment.

Other appealing options were braised leg of rabbit served with polenta and salsa di Toscana, wood-oven roasted rib eye, sweetbreads with sage-percuto, littleneck clams in garlic and pepperoncini or Winter Point Oysters on the half shell with mignonette. Try the blue foot chicken in the winter.

What is especially appealing about Annona is its attention to the cuisine experience, which is reflected in the sophisticated menu as well as the attentive staff. Over the course of the night, Pietro explained how the scallops were made, that the baby eels came from Spain and the carpaccio from a woman in Pennsylvania. Each particular vineyard had a story behind it. We drank wine from the family vineyard in Tuscany that grew the first Chianti grapes many generations ago. Each dish is crafted with thoughtfulness, each ingredient carefully selected. In this sort of intimate charm, a diner finds a warmth and culinary excellence uncommon outside of Italy.

Physique 57, Opening in Bridgehampton and Manhattan

Jennifer Maanavi has long idolized dancer and fitness guru, Lotte Berk. As a totally devoted follower of The Lotte Berk Method for five years, and a resident of New York and the Hamptons, she suddenly found herself without an exercise class when the method closed its doors. Maanavi, a striking, vibrant, astute businesswoman and exercise maven, with great ambition and determination, decided that she would open her own exercise studio to fill the void, named Physique 57. Armed with an MBA from Columbia Business School, 11 years experience as an investment professional on Wall Street (most recently at Morgan Stanley), she recognized a fantastic business opportunity was in the offing. Maanavi formulated a business plan and strategy guaranteed to satisfy all her future clients needs. Determined to keep the method available while fine-tuning and perfecting the program, she sought out the best instructors, many of whom had relocated to cities across the country, and convinced them to join her.

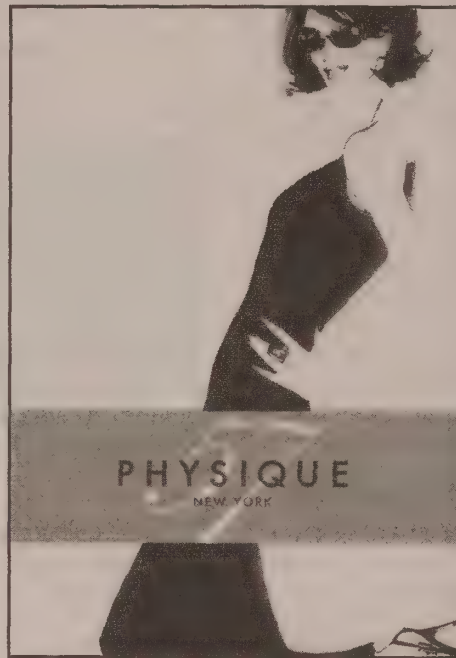

Maanavi hired Barbara Boolukos, a highly esteemed instructor of The Lotte Berk Method, who relocated from Florida to New York to join the Physique 57 team. After teaching the method for 23 years, she has become known as the oracle of The Lotte Berk Method. She has been an inspiration to her clients both in New York City and the Hamptons, where she has helped them improve body and fitness. As the lead instructor at Physique 57, she will not only bring her knowledge to new clients but will continue her longstanding relationships.

Finding that Tanya Becker, a top-ranking instructor with Lotte Berk for almost ten years, had moved to Michigan, Maanavi hopped on a plane and urged

Becker to be the first member of the Physique 57 team. Teaching at The Lotte Berk Method and training other instructors, she became a strong influence and helped perfect the method even further. Now, as director of training at Physique 57, she brings all of her expertise and knowledge to a brand new regimen of exercise that is "the ultimate transformative physical fitness experience."

The premise of the program is a series of exercises that stretch and strengthen almost every muscle in your body, resulting in a strong, lean and supple body. The classes incorporate a series of isometric movements, exercises at the ballet barre to benefit your seat, thigh, arm and abdominal muscles, as well as floor exercises designed to strengthen muscle and increase flexibility. Along with weight loss, you have the potential to reduce heart disease, diabetes, and depression through exercise. Promoting life expectancy and cognitive function are other benefits to a regular exercise regimen.

Exercise routines are constantly changing for the benefit of the student, allowing to achieve a more shapely and fit bodies. Students are monitored by the instructors, who offer a one-on-one approach to teaching. Motivational music that plays throughout the class spurs the clients to strive even harder.

Physique 57 is also reaching a male clientele and being embraced by professional athletes. Although there are plenty of push-ups incorporated into the strenuous and challenging exercises, its focus on the lower body is beneficial to men who pump iron for their chests and arms but tend to neglect their lower bodies. To create a well-balanced body you need to develop the leg and gluteus muscles. This plays a crucial role in the development of all other muscles as it stimulates the body to release testosterone. The benefit of the Physique 57 method is that you use your own body weight.

With Maanavi's business acumen, her style and zeal for staying fit, plus the incredible passion that Booluko's brings to the guidance of her students, combined with Becker's extensive exercise and dance experience, Physique 57 will fast become the new method.

Physique 57 debuts May 25th in Bridgehampton at 264 Butter Lane and in Manhattan on May 19 at 24 West 57th Street. For more information, call 212-399-0570 or go to www.physique57.com

Get Set for Summer-color

It felt as if Memorial Day would never come, and now it's just around the corner! All winter long, though we enjoyed the cold weather, change of seasons, occasional ski trip, enough is enough, right? Personally, I found myself counting the days until the "official" start of summer and then, poof, it's crept up on me before I could say, "sun tan lotion." Any day now it's officially summer and time for that much needed long weekend. To my despair, I'm not properly prepared for it at all. So with this in mind and for the next several weeks, I thought I'd clue us all in on the latest and greatest in trends, must know 06 health and beauty info, from make-up colors, to hair care, swimwear fashion, accessories, and more. That way we can all look good, as well as be fully equipped to have fun in the sun. This week we begin with color.

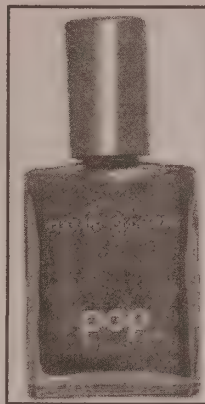

It's always important to be up on the latest make-up and nail colors for each season and this summer tends to be a really fun one, where we can experiment with fresh new looks.

Summer make-up colors for 06, according to make-up artists and magazines galore, are in tones of greens and blues. See Too Faced Candy Bars in Thin Mints ($25 Sephora) or the bright colors of Pop Beauty www.popbeauty.co.uk (either online, or also at Sephora) for some ideas. Even Jeanine Lobell, Stila Make-up creator, was quoted saying that blue and green colored beads inspired her eyeshadow colors. So it seems to be a consensus that blue and green are in this year for eyes.

That said, I forbid you to hop a time machine back to the eighties and start wearing big bold blue eyeliner and mascara.....this is a subtler look and one that should be done with caution. Don't be afraid to be bold, but know it is a hard look to get just right, according to Alyssa Morgan, a make-up artist I met recently on a fashion shoot. She's worked on the likes of Naomi Campbell, on many movie sets and even L'Oreal commercials. Morgan suggests that if you can't pull off "full-on" blue and green, like a pro, she says you should try "to offset the new summer colors (in clothing) this year of green and yellow, I believe a nice combo of pinks and taupes look the freshest." Or for a special occasion you can always hire someone like Morgan to create the latest look for you. Visit www.make-faces.com for more info from or about her.

Remember to go light or nude on the foundation and finish with a light texture and colored crème rouge in a fresh pink. This goes for the lips, too. A dusting of bronzer is always a nice touch, but easy does it.

Color for fingers and toes are a MUST in the summer. First things first, get a mani and pedi. Get those toes that haven't seen the light of day for goodness knows how long in tip-top condition and then make them even prettier with color. Fingernails are usually best in clear or light colors in the summer. You can go a little darker with your toes, but if you're running around barefoot in the sand and want a great pedi to last without looking chipped and worn it's best to keep the color on the lighter side, too. Then again, it's always fun to have a louder splash of color in the heat if you're doing something special and/or prepared to retouch. The new nail colors Essie has for spring are all in hues of light to mid-pink, with one mauve-ish tone called China Doll. The rest of the series has names that totally conjure dreams of summer and sun. "Spaghetti Strap" is pretty in very light pink and "Bikini with a Martini" sounds like my beverage of choice. "Flirt" and

"Infatuation" are always fun at the beach and they, too, are mid shades of pink. See www.essie.com to check them out for yourself.

Like Essie, its main competition, OPI, also recommend pinks for summer 06, but adds a little more spice to its colors with a "Mexico collection." OPI has slightly brighter colors and seem to cover all bases for 06. "You Rock-Acapulco Red" says it all, while "Tijuana Dance?" asks the question in an interesting Lilac shade. "Will you Mari-achime?" A purplish opal tone one might like to see, while I'm definitely hoping "Magnifico Mexico" speaks the truth - A rich terracotta that I'll be sure to get my hands on early next month for my trip to Puerto Vallarta, Mexico! See www.opi.com/mexico.asp for more colors and I'll see you when I return. Yeee haaaaa.

RUN FOR THE POTATOES NEXT SUNDAY

By Dan Rattiner

In 1978, the New York City Marathon was only a couple of years old. Two years before, just 850 runners had competed in it. There indeed was a more famous running race in existence at that time. This was the Boston Marathon. But it was only a few years before 1978 that an official for that race had run out on the course, grabbed a young woman who was trying to be the first woman to ever run in the Boston Marathon and ushered her off. No women allowed in the race, the official said. There had been a protest after the race ended. The next year, in Boston, women were allowed for the first time.

Before Memorial Day in 1978, there were no running races whatsoever here on Long Island. No Long Island Marathon. Nothing. But on that Sunday morning, for the first time, runners assembled in a pack on Snake Hollow Road in Bridgehampton, and embarked on the first running race on the island, the 10k Dan's Papers Potatohampton Minithon.

It was a historic event. The race was organized by this writer, who had never participated in a running race of any sort in his life. (In high school, he lettered in Golf.) On the morning of that first Potatohampton, here is what he did: It was a hot day but he arranged no water stops. There was traffic on Route 27 but he set up the running route to cross the Montauk Highway. It was 10k in length but he did not send anybody out ahead of time to measure it accurately. (It was actually about 9.6k.) He did not arrange for there to be any portable bathrooms. He bought a stopwatch to see how long the winner took, but nobody else. And he bought one trophy, which he awarded to the person who finished first.

Also, he did not notice at first that the route of the run meant the runners would cross the Long Island Railroad tracks not once but twice, once going north shortly after the start, and once coming back south about halfway through the race. And he did not notice until just before race day that a regularly scheduled train was due during the race.

The determining of this fact, just one day before the running of the race, brought with it a flurry of activity. I mean, what if somebody got hit by the train? The following arrangements were in place by race time: The Southampton Town Police agreed to post somebody at the railroad tracks to tell the runners to stop if the train was coming. The Long Island Rail Road officials agreed to inform the engineer on that particular train to come through very slowly, with his whistle sounding furiously. And the runners were told – in a special announcement over a bullhorn before the race and in writing in a flyer printed just prior to the race – that if they saw a train coming they were to stop and jog in place until the train passed. Many did. I watched them as they did that. Terrified that somebody would be killed, I stationed myself alongside the policeman at Hayground Road where the road crossed the tracks. And the whistle sounded and the train rumbled slowly around the bend and all the runners who were about to cross the tracks simply stopped where they were and did indeed run in place, knees high, to keep the blood flowing, for about two minutes while the train passed.

Just prior to the race, it was predicted that we might have as many as 100 runners in attendance. In fact, almost 300 runners showed up. Southampton Town Supervisor Marty Lang was there, having accepted an invitation to fire the starting gun, and the runners got out onto Snake Hollow Road and as Marty walked toward them with the pistol, loaded with a blank, tucked into his belt, somebody yelled GO and off they ran. Seeing it happen I clicked the stopwatch to ON. Marty turned to me.

"Now what?" he asked.

"Well," I said, having not even had the opportunity to introduce him over the bullhorn, "uh, thank you. I guess you can go now."

That first race was won by Marcel Philippe, a runner from the French Olympic Team, who completed the course in an astonishing 30 minutes flat. It was an extremely fast time, until somebody with professional equipment went out and realized that it was only 9.6 kilometers, not 10.

I had felt that we could run the race in order to show off the beautiful farm landscape of this end of the island. Certainly we did. The run went up through the potato fields (now horse farms) of Mitchell Lane, west on Scuttlehole Road past the little round ponds on that road (still there), past the Carwyth Dairy Farm (where there were cows there is now the Two Trees Stable and polo field), across the railroad tracks and Montauk Highway to Newlight Road (with the traffic on the highway held up by the police), down Newlight to Halsey, then to Bridge Lane and across the bridge (the old bridge, since replaced), up past the Sagg General Store (still there), past the Sagg Schoolhouse (still there), up Sagg Road to Ocean Road and finally to the finish line at the Lion's Club Softball field next to the firehouse (still there but expanded).

After the race ended, and the runners told me this was a wonderful run but they would really appreciate water stops, bathrooms, not crossing the railroad tracks, an exact 10k, awards in a dozen categories not just one and an appropriate timing device to record every runner – before I caved in and did all that for the second race what I thought was – boy, these people are finicky.

The race this year is to take place on May 28, the Sunday of Memorial Day Weekend, with the starting gun sounding on Ocean Road in Bridgehampton about 200 yards south of the monument at the Montauk Highway, at exactly 9:30 am. And it's a 5K not a 10K.

Runners should try to get to the pre-race area – the lawn at the Bridgehampton Militia Park on Ocean Road behind Ocean One Restaurant – by 8 a.m. if they need to register that day, or 8:30 a.m. if they have pre-registered by filling out the form in the full page ad in this newspaper you are reading.

Hopefully it will be a wonderful race. No rain. No problems. No lead car taking everybody off on a wild goose chase (as happened in 1992). And ribbons and trophies in eleven different categories given out afterwards.

You've Been Framed

At this point in my life, I've had enough memorable moments caught on film to fill a giant warehouse. While at times I've been so diligent as to compile scrap books of my memories, most chapters of my life are documented only in a messy pile in a big cardboard box. Some of the funniest or most poignant pictures, which deserve recognition, end up crushed, lost, or forgotten. With the advent of digital cameras, this problem has abated somewhat, because people only develop the pictures they really want. That way, you don't have to save fifty pictures of the same sleeping baby because you feel slightly evil throwing a baby picture in the trash.

Still, it's sometimes hard to get creative with displaying your photos in the public eye. It's one thing to have a great photo album, but honestly, who really invites friends over to look at pictures?

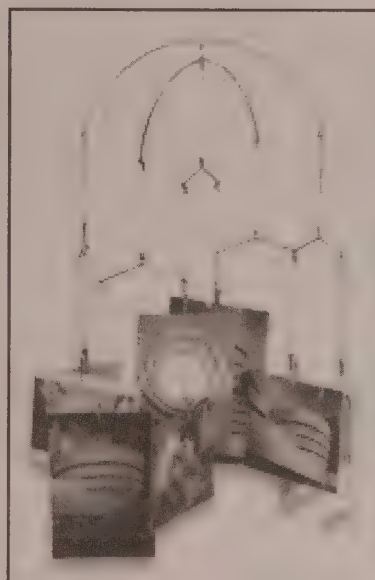

The best way to share your photos is to have them out on display. Not only does this allow visitors to see snapshots of the moments that make you who you are — having familiar pictures reminds you where you're coming from, and helps keep you grounded as you move forward and make new memories. And there are more ways to do this than your regular old picture frames on the mantle. Here are just a few ideas for displaying your photos for the world to see.

If you are like me, and you have a bunch of beloved photos that are rotting away in a box or a drawer, you need a quick fix that will take care of a few photos at once. There's always the tried and true option of the multi-photo frame. These come in any material, from wood to brass to leather. They can be vertical or horizontal, and can be mounted on the wall or can stand on their own. It's sometimes nice to choose a theme for these "series" displays. Maybe five years of Thanksgivings, or different sets of sisters in the extended family. My roommate and I have one of these fitted in a molding, with a series of us with different groups of friends, and the bottom picture is a photo of just us. Okay, we may be a little "us-centric," but it's really nice to see the worlds we've navigated together.

If you're looking to do something beyond the frame, look into clip displays. These are usually made of metal or brass, and they consist of several thin rods that jut out from a single point. You simply slip your photos into the clips, and they fan out on display. One of the attributes of this method is, contrary to the painstaking process of changing photos in your wall frame, you can keep a constant rotation going. Plus, you can insert anything from photos to greeting cards, from ticket stubs to fortunes from fortune cookies. I found a great clip display on eBay for just $7.

To step even further outside the box, look into photo mobiles. I used to only see these in cribs and cradles, where parents would hang pictures of themselves or happy scenes for the baby to look at when he/she is alone. But now you can hang a photo mobile from your living room ceiling, or set it up on the kitchen countertop. It's a great place to display postcards, pictures, and drawings. You can purchase yours at the Guggenheim store for $15.

If there is one photo in particular that you've really grown attached to, and you want to display it with prominence, online photo stores offer an amazing service. You can get your digital photos printed on any size canvas. The image is laid directly onto the canvas, and it looks very professional. My sister ordered a close up of a flower in this fashion, and it looks amazing on her wall. I was shocked when I complimented her and she said that she had taken the picture herself. The cost is around $100, but it's your own piece of original artwork.

If you have gone through all the options above, and you still find yourself sitting on too many great photographs to possibly display, fear not. There's always the collage method. By cutting out the important aspects of your photos and putting them together, you can get the effect that you want without taking up as much space. Lay photos over each other on a piece of poster board to create one synthesized collection of the memories you want to share.

Ten Serious Slip-Ups Homebuyers Often Make

Don't let the excitement of buying a home lead you to commit one of these common bloopers.

1. Bidding on a home without getting pre-qualified.

Not only does prequalification help you figure out what you can afford and approximately what your future payments will be, it's also a powerful tool to convince the sellers that you are serious about buying a new home. They will be confident that you know what you're getting into and will be able to fund your purchase.

2. Skipping the home inspection.

Even if you have bought and sold many houses, it's still possible to overlook flaws and problems in the property you're considering. A home inspector will run through a detailed checklist to be sure any major flaws are discovered so you are not caught unaware.

3. Searching for home listings only on your own.

Searching the Internet or ads is great but often the listings aren't up to date, and you may actually be getting excited about a home that's already been sold. The best way to find home listings is through a licensed local real estate agent.

4. Choosing the wrong real estate agent.

Your agent should have your best interests in mind, and you should be confident in his or her abilities and familiarity with your requirements. Selecting a compatible agent is crucial to save you time and to protect you from looking at houses you don't want or can't afford.

5. Putting on blinders.

You may have a picture in your head of the ideal house but that isn't usually the way home buying works. Don't discount a house because it doesn't exactly match your ideal. Lean to be a little flexible. After all, you can always renovate or add on to a house that's in the right neighborhood at the right price. Those are two things that you can not change!

6. Not developing a long-term financial plan.

Yes, you are buying a house now that's your short term financial plan, but what are your long-term financial goals? Will you sell the house at a profit in a few years, or stay there the rest of your life? Will it accommodate a growing family, or will it seem too empty when the kids move out? Consider these questions and other life events that could shape your thoughts on the kind of home you want to buy.

7. Buying the cheapest insurance.

We can't stress enough how important it is to shop for the right insurance coverage for your new home. Be sure to ask your insurance agent about any special coverage (flood, tornado, etc.) that may be required in your new neighborhood.

8. Deciding against a home warranty.

This extra coverage, usually for a one-year term, is added protection against things that might go wrong in your new home. It covers unexpected problems that you were unaware of at the time you moved in.

9. Not understanding your total financial commitment.

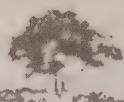

Sure, your loan officer explained your mortgage, escrow and closing costs, but there are other costs associated with home ownership. Brand-new home buyers need to remember that no landlord will come to repair a broken pipe or a leaky roof. Utilities and insurance costs must be considered. And every one needs to be prepared for tax reassessment. Make sure your loan officer explains your settlement statement so that you completely understand it before you close.

10. Looking only at the house, not the neighborhood.

Be certain you make inquiries about the crime rates, school rankings, environmental concerns, neighbors and any other characteristics that could impact your new home and your life. Don't let anyone brush you off, and don't make an offer without getting satisfactory answers.

We hope this checklist helps you choose your new home with confidence and avoid these common mistakes. Remember your loan officer and real estate agent are great resources for information on all aspects of home buying, including referrals to other experts. Use their knowledge to your advantage!

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

The Smell of Yellow

In Mexico, a day each year is set aside to celebrate the dead. This celebration, called "Day of the Dead," is a festive time, celebrated with marigolds. Never have I seen so many flowers displayed! The marigold is native to Mexico and elsewhere in this hemisphere and was the symbolic flower of death according to the Aztecs, because it dies quickly once cut. They called it "Zempasuchil." Our modern name comes from the Virgin Mary; the original name was "Mary's Gold."

The festival reminded me this lovely yellow flower is a mainstay in many summer gardens, and certainly one of the most treasured and valued annual bedding plants at Rock Cottage. It has been grown in gardens throughout the world for hundreds of years. This is no wonder: the plants are easy to grow, showy, and bloom reliably all summer. They have a distinct fragrance that, while not appealing to everyone, is crisp and clean. They have few insect and disease problems.

Seeds germinate easily after the danger of frost has passed when sown directly in the garden. They take only a few days to emerge, but require about 45-to-50 days to flower once the seeds are sown. When a second set of leaves appears, the plants can be thinned out and/or transplanted to a final location. For the quickest results, well-developed transplants may be purchased from any of the nurseries on the East End.

Marigolds are versatile and easy to grow with some basic care. Prize-winning marigolds require garden soil that is loamy, enriched, and well-drained. Full sun locations get the plants to bloom profusely. Shaded locations produce lots of lovely green leaves but few flowers. Deadheading spent blossoms throughout the season invigorates the production of more blooms, thus a constant display. Spraying the plants with organic, liquid fertilizer every few weeks during the season further creates a spectacular display, provided the plants are kept moist, especially in times of drought.

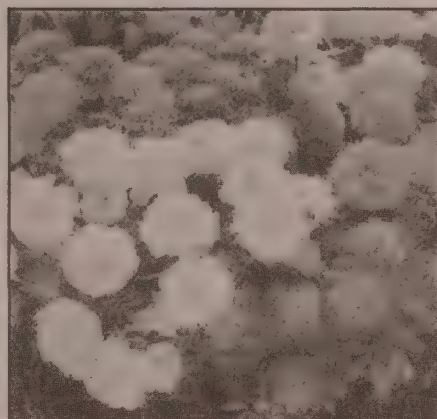

There are many varieties of marigold to choose from and new cultivars are introduced every year. Part of the Compositae family of plants, marigolds range in size from dwarf (about 10-12 inches tall) to quite large (about 3 feet tall). There are also various flower shapes: chrysanthemum, pompon, doubles and singles. Generally, all marigolds belong to one of four categories: African (Tagetes erecta), French (Tagetes patula), Triploid (Tagetes erecta x Tagetes patula), and Single (Tagetes tenuifolia (signata) pumila). Within each of these, there are many hybrids producing variations in color and size.

African marigolds are excellent bedding plants that range in sizes from 10-36 inches tall. The taller varieties are great as background plantings. Flower color is typically yellow or orange and its shape is usually double. French marigolds are smaller, bushier plants of medium height (8-to-16 inches tall) with large flowers that can be single or double. There are also dwarf varieties that have small flowers in yellow, gold, orange, or mahogany-red. Many varieties have bicolored flowers. Flowers may be single or double. The French marigolds have a longer blooming season than the African types, and usually last from spring until frost.

The Triploid hybrids are a cross between the French and African marigolds and produce flowers of 2-to-3 inches in diameter. Flowers may be yellow, gold, or orange – many of which are bicolored. The Single marigolds are simple, daisy-like blooms that come in shades of burgundy, yellow and bicolor. This type cannot seed itself, so manufactured seeds need to be bought each year. The seeds also have about a 50% failure rate in germination.

While marigolds are seldom bothered by insects and diseases, they are not problem-free. Spider mites are capable of devastating a bed of marigolds in hot, dry weather. Grasshoppers can also cause damage. Slugs and snails love the leaves as an overnight snack, and deer will munch away all night. Interestingly, some gardeners plant marigolds in their vegetable gardens as a means of repelling harmful insects. Unfortunately, research concludes they are not an effective preventative.

Occasional dusting with a granular insecticide helps the insect problems. For the deer, it seems only a shotgun will remedy the situation on the East End!

Nonetheless, marigolds are a worthy choice for summer. Their ease and beauty are certainly reasons to include them in every garden. Because of the range of colors, sizes, and shapes available, those who once, thought marigolds were garish and unappealing need to take another look!

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Land - is there any left on the East End? The answer is yes! But the real question is, at what price? Realistically there is land for sale, but for the most part, it is at prices only the very high profile buyers can afford. Particularly substantial parcels consisting of more than just a few acres can really cost you. If your wallet is bulging you may have the luxury to peruse the more sought after pieces in Southampton, Sagaponack, Amagansett, or Water Mill where there are some truly exciting choices. Most times properties, especially buildable ones on the ocean, attract interested buyers long before they hit the market. If one were to add the perks such as already zoned building into the mix, they simply fly. Builders and developers on the East End are in-tune with what may soon become available, as are their brokers; word of mouth will usually have these properties spoken for long before they ever become a conventional listing.

Oceanfront land is such a high commodity here on the East End that it is hotter than hot. Dreams that outside contractors have of hitting on waterfront parcels here are just that. If it does happen, many times it's pure luck. Just this week a broker called me inquiring about a parcel of land, ten acres in Sagaponack, which he had was coming onto the market. The questions heard were: Did I know it? What was the value? And to whom could he sell it if he were to get the listing? The answer was: you're too late. The property was already signed, sealed and soon to be delivering eight high-end homes to be built by a local builder who scooped it up before word ever reached the hopeful broker's up-island office. The East End land market is a tight one because East End builders know every nook and cranny of their area. It is a rare moment when an outside builder or developer lucks out and cashes in on their turf.

There are individuals that buy sizable pieces here but they are people like Howard Stern who can afford the hefty $20 million price tag for just 4 oceanfront acres and still have the bucks to build. And, as far as the very high-end in land goes, patience is the name of the game. Many times we may see extremely high priced parcels sit on the market for a bit longer but the reasoning is that they will eventually find the right buyer who will pay the outrageous sum. It is no secret that Hamptons real estate is not for everyone but only for those few select, high-end, deep-pocket buyers.

If you have $50 million, you can purchase 9.5 oceanfront acres in Amagansett from the same developer that just listed and sold the highest priced estate here so far this season at $26.5 million, Project Real Estate. This rare opportunity offers two 2.28 oceanfront acre pieces, as well as two additional parcels with ocean and Napeague Harbor views. The property has the potential of housing a grand Hamptons compound, including an oceanfront mansion with a pool and tennis court and guest cottage. The property is also listed dually with Prudential Douglas Elliman in Bridgehampton.

Also at $49,500,000, is 41 sub-dividable farm acres in Sagaponack. The property offers views of the ocean and has the potential of housing a sizable mansion and compound with all the trimmings. It is also listed with Prudential Douglas Elliman in Bridgehampton.

On Captains Neck in Southampton, there are 8.3 acres with 530 feet of shoreline at $27.5 million in Southampton's estate section that has the potential to be a grand estate with a pool, pool house and tennis court. There is an existing boathouse and dock on the property. Or, one could sub-divide. This one is listed currently with Allan M. Schneider of East Hampton.

DON'T BE SHY

Dear Dan,

Last year, I moved to East Hampton to send my daughter to the Ross School. What a great move for both of us! People have told me what a terrific publisher you are, and I thought you might like to know about my burgeoning business that is growing right here in your world. I have created an Internet dating site. FiftyPlusConnect.com for the sophisticated and adventurous set. The site, aimed at boomers and above, had an exciting launch and is rowing daily.

I invite you to take a look at the site. I've also taken the liberty to include a press release about the site. Best wishes.

AN ASSET TO THE COMMUNITY

Dear Dan,

I live in Sag Harbor and have enjoyed going into B. Smith's over the past several years. It was very disturbing to read about the nasty telephone calls she and her husband have received and the many rumors circulating around town about them and their restaurant on the wharf. I have always had the highest regard for her and consider her a very successful entrepreneur. I think Sag Harbor has been lucky to have her very attractive restaurant at its great location on the harbor and I certainly hope it remains there for several more years!

It's very hard to believe that in 2006 in the Hamptons, an area we like to think of as sophisticated and enlightened, that race would be an issue for anyone in any business.

NOT SO INSURED

Dear Dan,

I have officially joined the ranks of the "I was in good hands with Allstate until they dropped me on my head" blues. Yesterday I received a letter with "unfortunate news" that the company had made "some very difficult decisions" one of which was to not renew my homeowner's policy. The unsigned letter (I've never received "Regards" from "Customer Experience New York Region" before), twice "urged" me to contact my agent, and ever so thoughtfully provided me with his name and phone number. In speaking with my agent, he acknowledged that I have indeed been a customer since 1979, that my premiums have always been paid on time, and that in addition to my Homeowner's Policies they have always handled my Personal Umbrella Policies. The reason I was given for the termination? Allstate does not write my car insurance policy. That's almost as good as Coastal Evacuation Signs. Anyway in my search for "The Answer", I happened upon Senator Charles Schumer's February 9 press release entitled "Schumer Asks New York Insurance Department To Investigate Allstate". Contained therein is a more plausible explanation for Allstate's actions. I've e-mailed Senator Schumer about my experience, you may wish to do the same.

Regards, (and I mean that sincerely).

FACT CHECKER

Dear Dan,

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni comments in his review of United 93 that "I'm old enough to remember the Vietnam War when our "War Department" was retitled the "Department of Defense." This is incorrect. The Department of Defense was created in 1947 under the National Security Act of 1947 signed by President Truman. The first Secretary of Defense was James Forrestal. 1947 was fourteen years before John F. Kennedy deployed the first US troops to Vietnam in 1961. In 1947, Vietnam was still colonized by the French.

I don't know how old Guy-Jean is but perhaps he needs to review his history before trying to draw historical analogies.

DID YOU HEAR THAT?

Dear Dan,

You don't have to be on an exotic AFRICAN JOURNEY to attempt taking off in a single engine aircraft to experience the adventure of having wild animals crossing the runway. Just last week at the Mattituck airport I was about to wave goodbye to Geir when his music played on my cell phone.

"What?" I asked.

"I can't take off, there are deer on the runway. Can you drive your car down to the end and honk the horn to chase them away?"

I hopped into the Altima and slowly drove from one end of the tarmac to the other, tooting a couple of times at the deer poised to play chicken with the Skyhawk. Just as I reached the end I felt a whoosh through the open sunroof as the belly of the plane swooped overhead and lofted off over Peconic Bay, back to the Hamptons. I waved my hand through the open roof and circled back past a gang of deer with attitude.

Love and Peace.

Missing A Bumper

Police in Hampton Bays pulled a man over for driving his car without a bumper. After further investigation they learned that the man had a suspended drivers license from five previous incidents. The man reportedly said this to police, "Look, I understand that I am a really bad driver, but it is the only thing in my life that makes me happy. Please don't take that one thing away from me." Police suggested to the man that he attend carnivals and use the bumper cars there.

IT'S TIME TO PAY OFF EQUITY LOANS AND LOWER MORTGAGE PAYMENTS BY 45%

Recent increases in the prime rate have homeowners scrambling to consolidate high rate home equity loans and lines of credit.

Many took out these loans when banks were pushing them as a replacement for conventional mortgages and enticing consumers with no closing cost teasers. Well, now it's time to anti up.

"Equity loans should not be used for long term financing" says John Sauro, President of North Atlantic Mortgage Corp. "It's likely the prime rate will increase another half percent before years end, pushing homeowner's payments even higher"

So what should you do?

Many have decided to refinance their first mortgage and the equity loan into one mortgage while rates are still low. "You can still get a great rate and there are programs available that can considerably lower monthly payments. A five minute consultation could result in significant savings."
